Building Happiness

Mr. Green Sees Danger

Who Knows His Real Name?

Shocking and Scandalous

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

At "Two Mountain Chalet," "A beautiful lodge cradled among the Rocky Mountains," Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt had dinner after driving 125 miles through Glacier National Park over the Great Divide. After dinner, in a broadcast speech, the President said many things of interest to the people of the United States.

He said, in the first place, that "the stealing of the public domain is finished." That is most encouraging.

The President says the nation has entered "an era of building, the best kind of building—the building of great public projects for the benefit of the public and with the definite objective of building human happiness."

That is ancient building. Men have been at it since the Stone Age, and before. Unfortunately, you can't build "human happiness" simply by erecting better homes, although that helps. Human happiness must be built inside the human skull, that is where happiness resides, and where it must be developed.

The President enjoys human happiness because he is busy and has power to do what he chooses. A gulf separates him from the average human being.

A great naturalist said:

"There is more difference between a highly developed, civilized man and a low savage than there is between that savage and a blade of grass."

That is the story. There is a considerable difference between various types of white men.

Mr. Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, warns the government that it must do something for the ten millions idle. If it does not act swiftly, Mr. Green says,

"Society may take over the means of production."

What is "society"? President Roosevelt's government has already "taken over the means of production," taking charge of industries, payrolls, shops, farms, spending public money by the billions in an earnest, sincere effort to restore prosperity by financial artificial respiration.

What is the "society" that would "take over the means of production?" Would it be mobs in the streets, or perhaps an organized and armed body, of union men? How would it operate?

There is no doubt that we are in for some interesting happenings after the tax-payers' money shall all have been spent, and inflation shall have run its course. It would be interesting to know just how those happenings are to "shape up."

A girl in San Francisco, about 28, height five feet, one inch, puzzles authorities because she cannot remember her name, or tell where she came. There are on earth about sixteen hundred millions like her. Not one of us knows where he came from originally, or what his name was before he landed here, to be named by his father and mother.

We wear our names for a short time, three score and ten years, and then leave them. They are no more real than are the names that we give to the planets and big stars that, perhaps, have their own names. The real name of Arcturus is not Arcturus, and the real name of Tommy Smith is something else. He was not Tommy Smith before he landed here, and he will not be Tommy Smith after he leaves. You could hardly imagine an angel named Tommy Smith.

Constantine, Algeria, reports bloody, fatal rioting between Mohammedans and Jews. More than 20 Jews were killed, many injured. An Arab mob, armed with blackjacks, "yataghans" and "Arab knives," invaded the city's ghetto, "setting fire to houses and dragging Jewish men, women and children into the streets, to stab and beat them."

The mob attacked houses of leading Jews of Constantine, the fighting lasting for 36 hours. Houses of Jews were set on fire, the inhabitants forced into the streets, shot and stabbed.

The rioting was started by a report circulated among Arabs that a Jewish soldier, Elie Kalifa, a regimental tailor, entered a mosque at the prayer hour and insulted Arabs at the Mohammedans.

French troops called in to stop the rioting killed eight.

POPE PIUS ATTACKS HITLER'S NAZI CHURCH

HURRY CALL SENT FOR POLICE

Sixty strikers at the John T. Lodge, Inc., wool mill, Pleasant street, Watertown hurled rocks at the company buildings today about an hour after a committee of the strikers had held a conference with executives of the mill.

About one hundred employes went out on strike following an announcement by the concern that a 20 per cent reduction in wages would go into effect this week.

The night crew refused to begin the working schedule last night and many of the crew were on hand today when the day shift reported for work. A brief conference between the two shifts was held near the company office and the day shift joined the strikers.

GIRLS HURL STONES

Girl strikers took part in the rock-hurling.

Factory executives sent a hurry call for police and cruising cars sped reserves to the scene.

John T. Lodge, senior member of the firm, in talking with the committee representing the strikers, declared that it would be impossible to operate the plant at a profit unless the reductions were accepted by employes.

He stated that mills in New York State that the firm is competing with are now paying 36 cents an

WIFE, SAVING HONOR, MUST 'LIVE DEATH'

Motionless on a cot in the Haymarket Relief Hospital lies a 33-year-old mother, apparently doomed to a "living death" because she refused to be a faithless wife.

Mrs. Constantine Ceci, doctors declared today, will survive the bullet wounds she suffered last Wednesday in the North End from a gun in the hands of the man she repulsed, Rocco Lombardo, who killed himself after shooting her.

But she will never walk again and she may never move again.

PARAPLEGIA RESULTIS

One of the two bullets that entered her body passed through her spinal column and severed the spinal cord, the nerve center controlling the entire system below the brain.

The paralysis medicine men call "Paraplegia" resulted and for it medical science knows no cure. The damage can never be repaired.

Conscious of all that is going on, and feeling no pain, Mrs. Ceci lies in whatever position nurses place her, her arms and legs and head adjusted by her attendants. Only her black eyes, in her white face

2 Principals in New 'American Tragedy'

NO SENSE IN IDEA SAYS PONTIFF IN TALK

By Associated Press

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Aug. 7—Pope Pius today made a severe attack on the German National church movement during an audience granted twenty members of the German Catholic Youth Society.

Declaring that the German National movement "lacks common sense," His Holiness urged his visitors to "continue courageously to practice Catholicism" when they return to their country.

"In Germany, there is enormous confusion," said the Pope. There is absolutely no sense to such terms as 'positive Christianity' and others used in Germany to apply to new religion."

He said all good Catholics would remain faithful to the Holy See, then gave his blessing to the whole German people, expressing the hope that the people will conserve the Catholic faith.

Adolph Hitler's efforts to nationalize the Church of Germany, placing it under the control of the Nazi authorities, has given rise in the last few months to considerable trouble, at times verging upon open outbreaks between church followers and Nazi leaders and their adherents. Both Protestants and Catholics have been affected by the Nazi movement.

The statement today by Pope Pius therefore was taken in Boston as an indirect attack upon Hitlerism as it deals with religious matters in Germany and an attempt by the Holy Father to bar politics from Christian church questions.

Corning Dies in Bar Harbor Home

Bar Harbor, Me., Aug. 7 (AP)—Edwin Corning, 50, Lieutenant-Governor of New York State in 1927-1928, died today at his summer home here. He had been in ill health for several years.

HIT-RUN AUTO INJURES ONE

A hit-and-run driver crashed into the back of a parked car in Columbus avenue today, injuring Stanley F. Miller, 29, of Chilcott place, Jamaica Plain, who was repairing the radiator of the car.

Miller was thrown several feet. He was taken to the City Hospital by a passerby. Doctors said he sustained scalp lacerations and internal injuries.

According to the police, the hit-and-run driver raced on down Columbus avenue.

Patrolman Lawton Pierce of the Roxbury division commandered an auto and pursued the driver and after a mile chase overhauled him at Washington and School streets, Jamaica Plain.

Edwards Is Guarded Against Suicide

By Universal Service

Wilkes Barre, Pa., Aug. 7—Alone in his jail cell, Robert Edwards, 21, was guarded against a suicide attempt, as defense lawyers considered requesting an exhumation of the body of Freda McKechnie, the "American Tragedy" sweetheart he is accused of murdering.

The possible second post-mortem examination was discussed as a means of substantiating the defense contention the young expectant mother died of shock when she learned of her village Romeo's infatuation for another girl, and that the blow on the head which Edwards is said to have confessed was struck after she was dead.

Another possible defense theory is that the girl may have struck her head on the sharp rocks in the bottom of Harvey's lake while diving.

The youth's attorneys are relying to a great extent on the dead girl's last hours. There was a gay supper party in her simple home, Rosetti Culver, her chum, described

NEW ATTACK ON JEWS FEARED

VARE, VET G.O.P. LEADER, DIES

By International News Service

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 7 (INS)—William S. Vare, 67, veteran Republican leader of Philadelphia and Pennsylvania, died at his home in nearby Ventnor today. He was 67 years old.

The noted political chieftain, whose career became a matter of nation-wide interest when he was barred from the U. S. Senate in 1926 for excessive campaign expenditures, was stricken with a heart attack at 11:40 a. m., this morning and died 25 minutes later.

Physicians pronounced Vare dead of an acute heart condition which followed an illness brought on by the heat a week ago last Saturday after he returned to his summer home here from Philadelphia, the scene of his blazing triumphs if the domain of politics.

Vare's death was completely unexpected at this time.

Only last night his son-in-law, Dr. John Shaw, announced that the veteran leader's condition was improving and that no serious complications had set in.

HITLER EULOGIZES VON HINDENBURG AT TANNENBERG RITES

100,000 ATTEND FUNERAL OF GERMANY'S PRESIDENT

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
Copyright, 1934, International News Serv.

Tannenberg, Germany, Aug. 7 (INS)—They placed President Hindenburg in his grave today to the quick, bright tune of the old Third Footguards "Parade March," and that was the saddest thing of all.

For that was Lieutenant Hindenburg's regiment and that was the tune the young lieutenant marched to 70 years ago.

They put him in a vault, and 84-year-old Field Marshal Von Mackensen was the first to enter it. He took off his plumed helmet, and his white hair shone in the sun.

Hindenburg's six-year-old grandchild crept in after Mackensen. Reichsleader Hitler kissed the hands of the Hindenburg daughters. A last cannon boomed. Sharp commands brought the army to attention. They goose-stepped out. The ground shook under thousands of feet. The funeral of Hindenburg was over.

LUDENDORFF ABSENT

It was such a funeral as the world has not seen in our generation. It lasted exactly one hour, but in that hour was packed the history of three generations—Hindenburg's lifetime.

Every man of rank in Germany was there with one exception. That exception was Ludendorff, who also was a victor at Tannenberg. Ludendorff had hated Hindenburg ever since the latter became president. Ludendorff considered himself chiefly responsible for the Tannenberg triumph. Jealous of the acclaim given Hindenburg today, Ludendorff refused to attend the funeral.

A sharp wind whipped down black smudges in the sunny skies. Sunshine in East Prussia is rare, but the burial day was brilliant.

Around the Tannenberg monument were assembled a multitude impossible to count, but numbered certainly at 100,000. As far as the eye could see, men, women and children sat or lay on the ground watching the smoke rise to heaven. For the most of them, that was all they saw of the ceremonies. Thousands of Hitler's guards stood in long criss-cross lines holding them back.

Eighteen special trains brought 2000 invited guests and 400 correspondents who occupied a full train. By automobile, bicycle, horsedrawn vehicles and afoot, tens of thousands of other pilgrims traveled all night to get here.

WORLD-WIDE TRIBUTE

Of all the multitude only a small section could enter the memorial. They sat in a circular tribune, ambassadors in one section, generals of the old army in another and Storm Troop leaders in another.

In the center rose a huge cross surrounded by a hundred wreaths from kings, presidents and prime ministers of every country in the world. In front of the cross rose the catafalque. Before the catafalque stood Hitler, speaking directly to Hindenburg. Facing Hitler sat the government and Hindenburg's relatives. Women were forbidden entrance, but 14 were counted, all probably relatives of the dead marshal.

Along the walls 250 flagbearers stood. Also storm troops, police dressed in dark blue, officers of the old army in field gray, a medley of all the representatives of the old and the new Germany.

The crowd rose to a silent salute and the muffled drums rolled as the body was taken from the field marshal's tower to the Crucifix. It was carried by eight army officers at a funeral pace.

The troops snapped to attention and presented arms as the body was carried by. As soon as it was placed before the cross the orchestra started the beautiful, powerful strains of Beethoven's "Eroica Symphony."

HITLER'S TRIBUTE

Following a eulogy by Hindenburg's chaplain, the Rev. Karl Dohrmann, Hitler began his address at 11:45 a. m., and at 11:30 a. m. he finished with a dramatic gesture, saying:

"Our field marshal now goes to Valhalla."

In his oration, Hitler said:

"This great soldier's name is twice remembered, in life after victory and then after death.

"When the German people heard Von Hindenburg's name the first thunderstorms of the World War swept over the nation. A few days later the bells of victory were ringing throughout the country in honor of the greatest victory in the history of the world."

DREAMS OF POWER

Hitler recalled the proclamation of the German empire at Versailles, crowning the victories of the Franco-Prussian War which was heard by Von Hindenburg as a young army officer. Said the Reichsleader:

"It was a proud time after centuries of weakness to find the German tribes again united and political weakness gave way to no thought of power. It must have been a glorious feeling to work in such times.

"Millions rallied to Field Marshal von Hindenburg after he assumed the supreme war command in unshaken confidence.

POLITICIANS SCORED

Responsibility for Germany's war defeat was placed upon the shoulders of her civilian leaders by Hitler when he said:

"Even the tragic end of this greatest fight (the World War) cannot be laid at the door of the war lord but must be attributed only to politicians."

A moment before the Reichsleader had pointedly criticized the civilian leaders and inferentially the Kaiser. Reviewing Hindenburg's war career, his summons from retirement to command the armies on the eastern front, and subsequently his elevation to supreme command, he said:

"When, unfortunately too late, the Kaiser's call placed him at the head of the entire German field army, he and his aides not only succeeded in ending a grave crisis but also led the German army in attack for two more years, gaining unheard of victories."

"It was a triumph for him and the German nation when as better man could be found for the presidency in 1925. It was written by fate that under him the nation of ascension should have been started and that under his name an alliance should have been concluded between the stormy forces of revolution and the old conservative elements."

The Reichsleader paused before the close of his address, then said:

"The Field Marshal is being carried to his last slumber amidst the sleeping greandiers of his victorious regiments.

"The tower grave (an allusion to his burial in the Marshal's tower of the Tannenberg monument) is his last general headquarters. The standards and flags of his armies are holding the death watch.

"Even if the last vestige of the Field Marshal's body has faded away he will live in our memory for all eternity. Our Field Marshal now goes to Valhalla."

PROCESSION TO TOMB

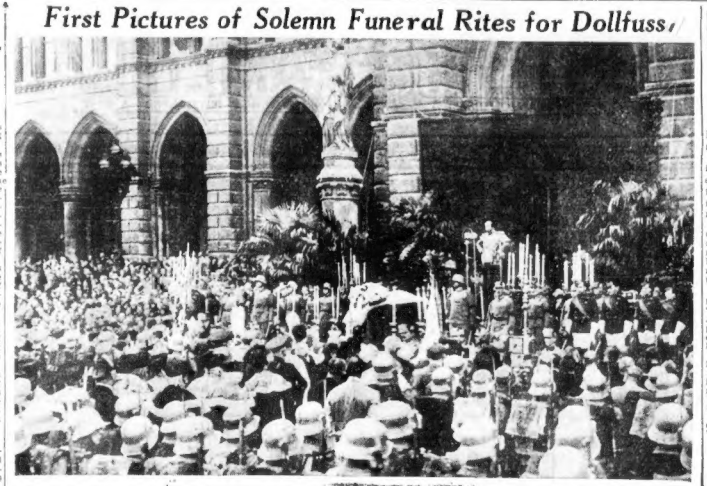
As Hitler concluded the troops massed about the great memorial presented arms, a military band struck up the soldier anthem, "I Had a Good Comrade," swinging into "Deutschland Ueber Alles," the Nazi hymn and thereafter the parade march of the third regiment of Foot Guards, Hindenburg's own.

Artillery began booming a one hundred and one gun salute as eight officers advanced slowly toward the catafalque and raised the coffin. Slowly they marched into the tower as troops presented arms again and the crowds raised their arms in farewell salute.

Hitler, with bowed head, followed the coffin to the tower with Colonel Oscar oVn Hindenburg, the field marshal's only son, the colonel's wife and his two sisters, heavily veiled, while five grandchildren dressed in white clung to their hands.

Members of the government, including Prussian Premier Hermann Wilhelm Goering resplendent in a Reichswher general's uniform accompanied them.

First Pictures of Solemn Funeral Rites for Dollfuss



Prince Starhemberg is shown delivering funeral oration over the bier of the slain Chancellor Dollfuss in Vienna. On the day of the funeral, July 28, the streets of Vienna were thronged by mourning thousands and as the funeral cortege wended its way slowly through the city the mourners knelt in prayer for the soul of the man who is now looked upon by his country as a martyred saint. These are the first pictures of the funeral to reach America.

ARCHDUKE OTTO QUITS BELGIUM

By Associated Press

Brussels, Aug. 7—The Archduke Otto, claimant to the throne of Austria, left his Belgian exile by automobile today. It was announced that he was headed for Italy to join his mother, the Empress Zita, who has been there for the last three weeks.

Otto's trip was considered by informed quarters to be connected with matrimonial rather than political plans.

He is expected to reach Italy this week end.

Otto Expected to Confer With Duce

By Associated Press

Rome, Aug. 7—The departure of Archduke Otto from Brussels today strengthened reports current here that he will meet Premier Mussolini.

It frequently has been rumored that a marriage to King Victor Emmanuel's youngest daughter, the Princess Maria, 19, has been sought for Otto.

Since the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss, however, many believe that the return of a Hapsburg to the Austrian throne is needed as an assurance against the final triumph of the Nazis in Austria.

PRIESTS, MINISTER SEIZED IN RAIDS BY NAZIS

Berlin, Aug. 7—Two clergymen in Germany are under arrest in connection with their activities regarding the memorial services for President Von Hindenburg.

Refusal to toll mourning chimes in Cobienz cost Father Otto Friesenhahn his liberty, he was taken into custody by secret police, and the parish was stated to have been greatly excited about his attitude.

Rev. Dr. Scharf, of Schsenhausen, a Protestant pastor, refused to surrender his church keys to a commissary pastor named by Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller to conduct memorial services. He was taken to Potsdam jail.

Scharf was a leader of the Pastor's Emergency League, and was "discharged" from his church last January by the Reichsbishop but permitted to continue preaching because of the solid support accorded him by his congregation.

At Osterburken Father August Deppisch Catholic priest, was fined 500 marks on a charge of stating in his pulpit that "the German mark is worth nothing abroad."

Two Catholic priests at Karlsruhe were under arrest on charges of "complicity and treason" based on the rigid foreign currency control laws.

The priests, Father Paul Herr and Father Fridolin of the Franciscan Order, called regularly at a prison where a manufacturer named Mutter is held on a charge of evading registration of 65,000 Swiss francs.

New Parking Fee War Opens at Revere

Another parking fee war was in the making today with Representative Augustine Airola of Revere demanding that the Metropolitan District Commission revoke the parking concession licenses at Revere Beach, just as it did at Lynn Beach.

At the same time, it was forecast that Governor Ely was considering abolishment of all such concessions where state-owned property is rented to private persons to be used for paid parking. The Governor said:

"Renting of this land for a nominal fee on the surface tends to encourage petting parties and other disorderly conduct, but there are certain phases I want to investigate."

UPHOLD REVERE ACTION

Chairman Davis B. Keniston of the metropolitan commission declared that the commission would refuse to revoke the Revere Beach license. He said:

"There is plenty of free parking space at Revere and no one is obliged to patronize the charge area unless he wishes. The public at Revere has always understood that situation and there has been no complaint regarding it."

OWNED BY BOARD

But, according to the objectors, what the public did not know was that the Metropolitan District Commission owns the parking space in Revere which had been let out to private parties.

The land is on a back street, and the commission came into ownership of it a few years ago when plans were under way to put through a traffic artery.

There was also talk of an investigation of the parking rights at the new swimming pool in Salem.

Representative Pratt stated that Thomas J. Hutchinson of St. Rose street, Jamaica Plain, who holds parking rights at Revere, only pays $285 annually for the lease. He asserted:

"Everything above the $285 is velvet for him. The whole thing is a terrible abuse. I don't think a public official has any right to grant such concessions on public property."

The parking concession license at Lynn Beach has been granted to Anthony J. Sansone, a Boston merchant, who lives in Brighton avenue, Allston. It was revoked by the metropolitan commission on orders of Governor Ely.

LONG TROOPER FIRES FIRST SHOT IN 'WAR'

By Associated Press

New Orleans, Aug. 7—Gunfire broke out in the Senator Huey P. Long-Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley "war" early today after a serio-comic show of armed strength for more than a week.

A sentry at Jackson Barracks, headquarters of national guardsmen called out on order of Senator Long, fired twice at an unidentified man he said was attempting to slip into the barracks.

The sentry said that when he spied the man behind some bushes he ordered him to halt, but the man jumped up and sped away instead. The sentry fired two shots, neither of which is believed to have taken effect.

The main battleground of the "war," however, in the heart of New Orleans, remains tranquil.

BOMBS, RIFLES READY

The guardsmen still are stationed in the registration office, equipped with machine guns, rifles, gas bombs and gas masks.

Mayor Walmsley's forces are concentrated in the City Hall, just across a narrow street from the registration office, also heavily armed.

The week-long war is a prelude to the September Congressional primary election in which Long and Walmsley are supporting opposing candidates.

HUEY IS "MISSING"

The Senator himself was called to appear in court and show reason for Governor O. K. Allen's continued domination of the city voters registration office with national guard troops, helmeted and armed with rifles and machine guns, under the executive's "partial martial law" proclamation of early last week.

A temporary restraining order issued by Judge Nat W. Bond, of civil district court, ordered the troops disbanded. The Senator has been reported "missing" for the past two days.

TRUCKERS SEEK HIRE PERMITS

Hundreds of truck owners have applied for permits to carry goods for hire at the office of the Department of Public Utilities, as a result of the law passed last February, giving such supervision to that department.

The law requires owners of all motor vehicles transporting property of others to pay a $10 registration fee, and $1 for a special number plate.

Concerns, using trucks to deliver their own goods, do not apply under this new ruling. It was pointed out that while large trucking concerns, carrying goods for others, need pay only one $10 registration fee, separate plates for each truck, will cost $1 a pair.

HELEN HICKS

Helen Jacobs (above) finds shorts very appropriate wear for women tennis players. But Helen Hicks, the golfer (left) agrees with the ban placed on shorts by the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association in New York. "They 're all right for kids," she said. Other women golfers, notably Beatrice Gottlieb and Maureen Orcutt, defended shorts. "Bathing suits do not shock the public, why should shortsit" they ask. GIRL STARS MAY DEFY EDICT OF N. Y. BOARD

By Associated Press

New York, Aug. 7—Feminine wielders of the mashie and the niblick were plunged today into an argument that threatens to shake the ancient Scottish pastime to its foundations, and it was nothing to do with mashies and niblicks, either.

The Women's Metropolitan Golf Association, sitting in solemn assembly, decreed that henceforth no woman may wear shorts in any tournament play under its direction.

The association's statement did not make clear whether the objection rested on moral or esthetic grounds. It merely announced that:

"Due to the fact that that various member clubs and other associations have expressed their disapproval of shorts or abbreviated knickers, the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association requests that all contestants refrain from wearing such apparel in future tournaments in deference to these wishes."

HARD ON TANNED LEGS

Mauren Orcutt, one of the game's leading practioners on the feminine side, opened the rebuttal. She said that she would obey the ruling but added:

"It is going to be hard on those ladies who have reduced their hips or who have procured a beautiful leg tan."

Beatrice Gottlieb, one of those who helped make a burning issue out of the shorts question by wearing them at a recent Association tournament, tok the set-back to the freedom of the knees more seriously. She said:

"Most of us appear in bathing suits before the public. I don't think that same public would be shocked. I'm all for shorts; they are the only sensible thing and they are about the only thing that makes the heat endurable in Florida or the drouth states."

COLD TO SAVE MEN

Miss Gottlieb once defeated the Prince of Wales in a match, and she pointed out that the prince wears shorts.

Miss Josephine F. Windle, executive secretary of the association, pointed out that the rule would have to be enformed by moral persuasion. She said:

"We play under the U. S. G. A. rules, of course, and technically could not force an anti-shorts ruling on any lady member. However, in courtesy to the member clubs, whose guests we are during tournaments, I believe the situation can be explained and trouble avoided."

Helen Hicks Against Shorts; Others Aren't

By Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 7—Little opposition to the vogue of wearing shorts on golf courses was found among Chicago's leading women golfers today.

Although the abbreviated costume was banned by the Metropolitan Golf Association, New York, no action was taken against the scanty attire here.

Mrs. Howard Raymond, president of the Women's Western Golf Association, said her organization had no thought of banning shorts, she added:

"In fact, I expect the vogue to grow among both men and women. It is simply a question of comfort and sufficient covering."

Helen Hicks, former women's golf champion who turned professional recently, was against the vogue, however. She said:

"It's all right for kids, but I don't like them on women. There isn't any costume quite so pretty for women on a golf course as a sweater and a skirt."

Coast Guards Hunt Hours for Rescued Yachtsmen

Failure of one coast guard unit to report the rescue of four men on a missing sloop resulted early today in a needless search of more than six hours by guardsmen from the Point Allerton station.

The 20-foot craft "Down Easter" was reported missing by the brother of John R. Conway of Huron avenue, Cambridge, who said the youths left Scituate for Savin Hill Yacht Club in Dorchester Bay.

Captain George Josephs, in charge of the Allerton station, despatched a boatload of searchers seaward on a call from coast guard headquarters in the Customs House. The searchers reported several times and were told that the sloop was still missing.

Meanwhile, Nelson and his three companions were towed from Nix's Mate to the South Boston coast guard station and later taken to their destination at Dorchester Bay. Guardsmen there failed to report the finding to the headquarters unit, with the result that their Allerton mates spent a fruitless—and sleepless—night in the needless search.

YOUTH IS HELD AT GUNPOINT

Following half a mile chase in Jamaica Plain this morning, Edmund P. Poole, 22, of Boylston street, Jamaica Plain, was captured at gunpoint by Sergeant Donald Fitzpatrick and Patrolman Collette O. Doucette of the Jamaica Plain division.

The chase started at a Green street drug store, where a window had been broken. Poole was held for appearance in West Roxbury court.

Back at Honeymoon Scene, U. S. Heiress Pooh-Pohs Rumors

By Universal Service

Venice, Italy, Aug. 7—Reclining on the Lido beach in a beautiful gold embroidered kimono, Barbara Hutton Mdivani scornfully laughed at talk that there had ever been a breach between herself and her prince. She said:

"This is certainly not a second honeymoon. We spent our first honeymoon here. And we are enjoying every minute."

Asked if the trouble which recently caused her to leave her London hotel for a nursing home without informing her husband, Prince Alexis Mdivani, and which brought her father hurriedly to her side from New York, was all healed, the heiress to the Woolworth millions replied:

"There never has been anything to heal. We are extravagantly happy. I am enoying myself immensely. This is the most beautiful place in the world."

Prince and Princess Mdivani are staying in the royal suite in the Grand Hotel overlooking St. Mark's basin, where they spent their honeymoon, and where, incidentally, Chancellor Hitler lived during his conference with Premier Mussolini.

They are active in the social set, taking a gay group to the Lido daily in their speed cruiser Alibads and in the evenings attending the smartest parties.

WATERTOWN STRIKERS BATTLE

hour while his new schedule calls for 40 cents an hour.

INTERVIEWS NRA

The pay schedule before the call called for 50 cents an hour for all skilled help and 35 cents for skilled operators. The proposed rate allowed unskilled help would be 40 cents an hour while the skilled operators were to have received 45 cents.

Company officials claim they have interviewed NRA authorities and have been given to understand they have the right to put the new schedule in effect after a shutdown and a renewal of operations on the same terms.

When police arrived they found about a dozen windows broken. Company officials said the strikers hurled the stones upon seeing machine guns near the windows.

Patrolmen Joseph James Murray and Edward Murphy warned the strikers against trespassing and loitering in the vicinity and more than half the strikers left the scene.

The remainder gathered in groups about 100 yards from the plant.

Meanwhile along two other battlefronts—in Malden and the other in Lynn, shoe workers sought by picketing to win their objectives today.

Forty men and women who were arrested yesterday afternoon at the Gregory-Read plant in Malden declared that they would be back today and that about 200 pickets from Lynn would join them, police declared.

LINK REDS IN PLOT

Commissioner James H. Fagan said that he was checking a report that Communists were behind a plot to bring Malden workers out on strike and that if the 200 start to picket today they will meet with arrest.

The pickets assert that Malden workers have irregular hours, that they are not being paid union wages and that they are not given the working consideration the union demands.

Yesterday afternoon the most severe clash between pickets and police came at the Eastern avenue shoe plant. There seven women and 27 men seized and hustled off to the police station. None of the pickets resisted arrest but three girls were bruised.

They slipped and fell on the pavement, police said.

According to officials, while the prisoners were awaiting bail in the police detention cells they joined in general singing.

PICKETING STOPPED

Police today stopped all picketing at the Gregory-Read Wood Heel Company, Malden, where men and women pickets from Lynn, seeking to unionize the open shop, yesterday clashed with the authorities.

Forty pickets arrived at the factory today. When four girls began to march in front of the plant on Eastern avenue they were warned by Sergt. Dennis Holland, in charge of a detail of 16 officers, that no more picketing would be allowed because there is no labor trouble in the factory. The pickets then went across the street to sit in the grass.

The 125 employes of the factory went to lunch under police guard. Harry Read, treasurer of the company, said he would make no concession to the demands of union labor.

PRISONERS CHEER

Forty-seven men and girl pickets arrested outside the plant yesterday sang and cheered in two buses under the windows this morning on their way to court where their cases were continued until August 16.

The cases of 29 pickets previously arrested were also held over. Cases continued until Friday were reassigned for hearing with the others at a special session of Malden court.

The pickets were represented in court by Ralph M. Goldfein, Lynn attorney, who entered not guilty pleas to all the charges of picketing and noise. The bail of $100 each was continued.

Where Girl Died in 'American Tragedy'

SUICIDE FEARED IN TRAGEDY

Freda as very happy at the little supper party, Rosetti said:

"Freda whispered to me her plans for a trousseau. She was so happy she told me she was going to have lovers' knots embroidered on all her wedding underwear. She drew the pattern for them on the tablecloth with her fork. We laughed and giggled over them."

EDWARDS APATHETIC

The defense contends that if Edwards went as far as a family announcement supper it is not likely that he planned to murder the girl.

The accused youth, a mining engineer, remained in his cell, disinterested in the legal aspects of his case. He expressed a brief outburst of grief when told his new love, Margaret Crain, Aurora, N. Y., music teacher, had left town without seeing him. Then he became sullen again.

WEAPONS REMOVED

Fearing the prisoner might try to take his own life, prison officials removed every possible weapon from his cell, even subtlecutting wooden pegs for nails in a table in the cell.

Meanwhile, the Edwards family, founders of the village of Edwardsville, were busy raising a fund to defend their son against the charge of murder. They have hopes of employing a noted criminal lawyer.

Leonard Morgan, who at present heads the defense, announced he will fight for an absolute acquittal for his client. He said there will be no attempt to change the charge to second degree murder or manslaughter, and added:

"Robert is either guilty of first degree murder, or he is innocent. Of course, we will contend that he is innocent."

District Attorney Lewis, although unwilling to discuss the State's plan of prosecution until after action by the grand jury later this month, indicated the defense strategy was satisfactory to him. He will ask for a verdict of death in the electric chair.

GIRL READY TO AID

Margaret Crain, on returning today to East Aurora, N. Y., said she was ready to go to Robert Edwards' aid if his attorneys thought any testimony she might give would help.

Her brother, the Rev. Leonard J. Crain, said she was "meeting the situation with great courage" and would stand by her sweetheart.

Whether the last act of this "American tragedy" will parallel the stage play is apparently unimportant to the imprisoned youth.

Prison officials feel sure he plans his own "curtain" in his own way, and therefore he is guarded so that a jury may write the finish to the drama.

Rosetti Culver was the last girl to see her chum, Freda McKechnie, alive before the real life "American Tragedy" in which, it is said, Freda was killed. Rosetti told of a gay party which preceded the killing of the Wilkes-Barre girl, (Pictures from International News Photograph Service.)

framed by heavy dark hair against the pillow, move.

X-rays show that a bullet deflected by a shoulder bone passed through the spinal column and severed the spinal cord inside, at a position just below the neck.

The second bullet caused an abdominal wound and ruptured a kidney. This wound is healing rapidly.

According to Dr. Bernard F. Devine, supervisor of the Haymarket hospital, Mrs. Ceci has a good chance of surviving, and may recover to exist through a normal span of life.

But she is doomed never to have the use of her limbs again.

She has not been told of the nature of her injury.

Joseph Ceci, the husband to whom she remained faithful at such awful cost, calls upon her daily. Her three daughters were taken to her bedside. Mary, 14, was with her when she was shot.

SPURNED OTHER "LOVE"

The children want to know why "mama doesn't move." Ceci knows but will not tell them.

Specialists have examined her and said there is nothing to be done. Very few whose spinal cords have been damaged or severed ever have lived.

The Ceci home is at 2 Baldwin place, North End. Mrs. Ceci was shot by Lombardo because she —happy with her husband and children—had repulsed his several efforts to involve her in an illicit love affair. She had told her husband of Lombardo's overtures and Ceci had warned the other man shortly before the shooting.

When Mrs. Ceci was shot, she whispered to the oldest daughter:

"Mary, take good care of the children."

COUNTY WASTE HIT BY COLE

Abolition or at least consolidation of the expensive and duplicating system of county government in Massachusetts, which is costing the taxpayers more than eight million dollars a year, will form an important issue in the primary and election campaigns.

To the G. O. P. standard bearers, silent on this economy reform, demanded by tax leagues, women's organizations and thousands of individual citizens overburdened with governmental costs, General Charles H. Cole, convention endorsed Democratic candidate for governor, will take a leading part in bringing home the issue.

With the recognition of the county setup as outworn and no longer excusable, the politically intrenched "county rings" face their frst major battle since the gauntlet was so courageously, if unsuccessfully, thrown down to them by Governor Channing H. Cox, a decade ago.

COLE STUDIES ISSUE

In committing himself to the fight against the system as it now exists, General Cole declared:

"All waste and duplication in government ought to be done away with for the benefit of the taxpayers.

"After further study the issue will be taken up by me. I will have something definite to say at this issue when the state-wide campaign opens."

On the heels of the Cole statement today, the Massachusetts Women's Political Club, Inc., statewide non-partisan organization, through its president, Miss Florence Birmingham of Brighton, issued a statement denouncing county government as "an ill-suited and out-moded function, preserved long beyond its usefulness."

Her statement was as follows:

"In pioneer days local government had to be set up hastily to meet the needs of widely separated people who travelled by horse and wagon. But modern transportation and communication methods have rendered county lines obsolete. They have brought sweeping changes.

"In this period close to economic disintegration, citizens are taking an unprecedented interest in government. It seems as if the depression sounded a bugle note for national mobilization for better citizenship. All over the country taxpayers are demanding the abolition of the county government. The only impediment to this reform is patronage politics.

DEMAND OF TAXPAYERS

"The history of county rings, darkened with revelations of plundering, is being demanded now by the taxpayers whose small homes had to be transferred to the Federal Home Loan Bank to avoid foreclosure for taxes.

"Now that we have passed the last frontier, we can give more time to ramping our government so that public business can be administered in a direct, efficient and open manner. Complexity and duplication, as well as other expensive deadweights, must be cast off."

DROUTH AREA IS SURVEYED BY ROOSEVELT

By International News Service

En route with President Roosevelt to Devils Lake N. D., Aug. 7—President Roosevelt travelled today into the heart of the great drouth belt to get a first hand view of conditions which already are estimated to have cost the middle west five billions of dollars.

North Dakota is one of the states hardest hit by the searing sun and the dry winds of this greatest of all drouths.

Mr. Roosevelt spent yesterday traversing it from west to east, pausing enroute to take a look at Devils Lake, which has receded 50 per cent in recent years.

Enthusiastic reclaimers and promoters hope that the PWA will ultimately authorize an expenditure which will hook up the Missouri river and Devils Lake. It is not regarded as likely that the President can be "sold" on the proposition.

CALAMITY SHOWN

That the drouth is a national calamity is becoming more and more impressed upon the president as he travels eastward. Between three and four hundred thousand families will have to be given relief during the coming winter, according to the FERA estimates, and ultimately thousands of these families will have to be bodily transplanted to greener climes, if the relief estimators are correct in their figures.

Half a billion dollars already have been allotted to combat the drouth in its various phases, and the end is not yet. The FERA is now engaged in buying and slaughtering some 200,000 animals a day. Processing the meat against the relief needs of next winter.

Eventually, it is estimated that the cattle supply of the country will have to be diminished by 25 per cent simply because of lack of feed.

POLITICIANS ABOARD

Although Mr. Roosevelt has professedly eschewed politics on his journey back to teh capital, it was a curious political fact today that the Roosevelt train carried one Republican Senator, Nye of North Dakota; one Farmer-Laborite, Shipstead of Minnesota, and one Democratic aspirant, Hoidale, who hopes to succeed Shipstead.

Big U. S. Loans on Crops Planned

Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press

Washington, Aug. 7 (AP)—A gigantic crop loan plan which would leave control of 1935 supplies in the hands of farmers who grow them, is hatching in the Farm Administration.

Modeled after this year's corn and cotton loans, the plan will call for government loans on a wide range of other crops. There will be a stipulation that supplies must be sold when prices rise to a certain point.

AL SMITH RAPS 'SABOTAGE'

By Associated Press

New York, Aug 7—Former Governor Alfred E. Smith, "Looking at the Record" of charter revision of New York City with old time fervor laid the failure of the present commission to political sabotage and recommended the creation of a new body to be appointed either by Governor Lehman of Mayor Laguardia.

Smith went to the people over the radio in the dual role of explaining the reason for his dramatic resignation and the resignation of five of his commission associates, and to appeal for support in a non-political revision of the city's charter. He said:

"The people I couldn't get along with were the stowaways who were put on board with monkey wrenches to throw into the machinery and scuttle the ship."

3 AMERICANS HELD IN CUBA

By International News Service

Havana, Aug. 7—A gun running plot, was the explanation of Cuban officials today, of the arrest of three American, held incommunicad in Principe fortress. One of them is Frederick Willcox, Jr., son of Frederick Willcox, who as chairman of the Republican National committee, headed the campaign to elect Charles Evans Hughes president in 1916.

The others were identified by Cuban officials as Arthur B. Needham and Arthur W. Hoffman. All are of New York City.

Officials said they had evidence that the men were connected with a plot to run arms into Cuba to groups who are plotting a revolution against President Carlos Mendieta. It was reported that 2000 rifles were landed yesterday.

Halifax Primate Growing Weaker

Halifax, Aug. 7—His strength sapped by recurrent hemorrhages, the 81-year-old primate of the Church of England in Canada, Most Rev. Clare L. Worrell, was reported to be weaker in a hospital here.

His condition was grave, attending physicians said.

Thousands of Cattle Killed by Drouth

By International News Service

Topeka, Kans., Aug. 7—With the Kansas wheat yield cut to an estimated 80,000,000 bushels, the corn crop cut to probably 50 per cent of normal and a water shortage that has killed thousands of cattle, the mid-west drouth has taken a gigantic toll in this section.

Governor Alfred Landon said today:

"The seriousness of the calamity in Kansas due to the drouth is not yet realized."

H announced that all branches of the state government, as well as individuals will have to undergo drastic economies in order to pull through until normal conditions return. Every county in the state is taking advantage of the government's drouth relief agencies and loans are being obtained for food for human beings and livestock.

HUNDREDS OF CATTLE DIE

Due to the great shortage of water, cattle have died by the hundreds or have been killed to end their suffering. Many animals, fed wilted weeds by frantic farmers, have died from poisoning and many others were victims of eating dirt.

Farmers in many parts of this section have been living during the summer on canned fruits and vegetables from last year's crops as they have no orchards or gardens this season. When these supplies are exhausted many will have to go on relief rolls. Officials are facing the prospect of seeing tax collections drop to the lowest point in history.

T three-year decline in rainfall and a deficiency of 38 per cent this year has put farmers all over Missouri to hauling water. Two-thirds of the farmers of the section depended for water on ponds and cisterns, which have been dry for months.

WILD GAME DYING

Throughout Kansas and Missouri conservation agents report daily finding many rabbits, birds and game dead and dying for want of food and water. Some consolation has been found in that insects, such as mosquitos and chinch bugs, have been less numerous.

One of the ravages of the long dry spell are gigantic dust storms. Thick layers of brownish dust, really the topsoil of parched sections farther west, have covered cities and plains.

Sand and dust piles feet deep have drifted around wooded sections and in gardens and fields of grain.

Horticulturists believe that seeds of "foreign" plants and weeds probably have been transplanted with the blown topsoil and that thousands of dollars will have to be expended by farmers to rid their lands of weeds.

LABOR LEADERS DEMAND NRA REVAMPING

With more than 30 resolutions already filed, the 49th annual convention of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor today settled down to real work at the Hotel Bradford.

Reorganization of the NRA, repeal of the daylight saving law, and creation of industrial organizations, were the objects of several of the resolutions.

Spurred on by speeches of Governor Joseph B. Ely and Daniel J. Doherty, commander of the Massachusetts Department of the American Legion, many more resolutions are expected before the 5 p. m. deadline today.

Departing from his former critical attitude toward New Deal policies, Governor Ely told the delegates that the recognition of collective bargaining must be credited to President Roosevelt. The governor declared:

"I am a great admirer and supporter of the President, but I am no 'yes man.'"

Scoring those rugged individualists that in reality are "ragged individuals," the governor said "the depression had outlined a new course for American business."

Commander Doherty in his speech said:

"The immediate concern of the Legion is the enactment of a universal draft law which will affect capital as well as labor.

"We ask that the burdens of war be distributed, that prices be frozen and all gains over a reasonable amount be conscripted by the government."

Asking for the co-operation of the Federation in ridding the country of "disturbers and those who do not believe in citizenship," Doherty warned of un-American doctrines being taught in some of our public schools.

Francis Fenton, New England organizer of the American Federation of Labor, also addressed the delegates. He called for strikes if necessary to enforce the Blue Eagle codes. He said:

"The NRA has given us a grand opportunity to organize, but without a strong militant trade union, it is no good."

Buses Searched in Hunt for Girls

All buses entering Connecticut and New York were being searched today for three runaway East Boston girls who disappeared last night to conquer the theatrical world of New York. They were equipped with one $10 bill.

The girls are 15-year old Florence Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Anderson; Mary and Elvira Nardone, 15 and 16, respectively, daughters of Guiseppe Nardone. All three live in Everett street.

COURT REFUSES M'ADOO PLEA

Los Angeles, Aug. 7—Overruling the protest of attorneys for United States Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, the superior court here permitted to remain in the files of Mrs. Eleanor Wilson McAdoo's recent divorce suit the criticisms of procedure voiced by the court's presiding judge, Frank C. Collier.

Judge Stanley Murray denied the motion by McAdoo's lawyers that Judge Collier's remarks about the divorce be stricken from the record on the ground they were immaterial.

Judge Collier's comment on the divorce, which was granted 42 minutes after the petition was filed July 17, had no effect on the validity of the decree, but the jurist said the California state bar was investigating the case to determine if there was irregularity.

MRS. ANTONIO FATE NEARS

Elizabeth Town, N. Y., Aug. 7—A supreme court justice reserved his decision on the application of Mrs. Anna Antonio, sentenced to die for the murder of her husband, for a new trial.

After hearing a lengthy appeal of the woman's counsel, Daniel H. Prior, for a new trial on basis of newly discovered evidence, Justice O. Byron said he would withold his decision "for a day or two."

Prior, in his appeal, contended that an affidavit which he obtained from an Albany priest was "new evidence" that might have changed the trial jury's verdict.

The 26-year-old mother is now scheduled to die in the electric chair at Sing Sing on Tauresday night, along with two male accomplices, for the insurance murder of her husband in May, 1932.

Three times Governor Herbert H. Lehman has reprieved her and the men, Sam Farace and Vincent Saetta, but he has not granted the application of any of the trio for clemency.

Radio Car Traps South End Boys

Two South End boys are under arrest today, charged with breaking and entering into a building on Summer street, South Boston.

According to police, the boys entered the building through a skylight, and slid to the floor on a rope. A cruising car, answering a broadcast from headquarters, was responsible for the quick capture of the pair, police said.

SUIT ATTACKS STRIKE TROOPS

By Universal Service

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 7—Employers in Minneapolis' strike of 7000 truck drivers launched a counter-attack here upon Governor Floyd B. Olson's so-called military dictatorship by filing an injunction suit to dissolve the state of martial law proclaimed by the governor on July 25.

The suit was a direct reply to the governor's latest action in revoking permits for the operation of all trucks except those transporting the absolute necessities of life, such as milk, ice and essential food supplies. Thus a city of half a million population was left virtually without commercial transportation.

The governor refused comment on this latest move against his strike policy except to say:

"I try lawsuits in court."

gest that commercial rivalry and jealousy had more to do with the outbreak than any religious quarrels.

The Senate committee on banking and currency calls "shocking" and "scandalous" the investment of public money in worthless foreign bonds, recklessly bought by banks, and distributed among American investors.

The Senate might have discovered that this process was going on at the time. It was frequently pointed out in this column that American billions were being sent abroad for bonds that would never be paid.

Senators should remember that the United States government set the example in "scandalous" and "shocking" waste of the people's money when it lent ten thousand millions of dollars to dishonest European governments that sent shiv statesmen here to hoodwink our childish politicians.

Mothers will want to know that one little Dionne quintuplet, Marie, has undergone an operation to remove a "blood tumor" on the right thigh. Radium was used and the infant slept through it all, but woke up and protested when the adhesive tape was removed.

All four of her sisters, Yvonne, Annette, Emilie, Cecile, also slept sweetly, while Dr. Edmund Kelly, distinguished surgeon, operated.

Nothing is too good for the little quintuplets, first that ever lived longer than a few hours.

Adolf Hitler, eulogizing the late General Von Hindenburg, prays that God will "graciously permit us to find the right path to guarantee our people happiness and peace, and protect them from the disaster of war."

It depends largely on the German ruler, Hitler himself. Lloyd's of London would almost insure you against war, if you could guarantee that Hitler would not start it.

Hitler's speech, including his prayer, was truly and interestingly eloquent. If he wrote it himself, he wrote a good speech and a good prayer. He and other Germans are justified in their statement that, if Europe does not want war, it should prove it by revising the Versailles treaty, oppressive, unjust and cruel.

If that treaty had not been what it is, there probably never would have been any Hitler.

WHOSE JOB . . .
Father's or Mother's?

"WHY," asked the Bachelor Uncle, "do fathers leave to mothers the job of moulding their boys during the years when a man's influence would mean so much?"

He seemed to feel that he knew the answer, and continued: "Now, take my brother, for example. His oldest boy is in college, the next in prep school, and during the summer the younger ones go off to camp. Whose job is it to see that they are equipped, to keep in touch with them, to give them comfort or advice when they need it? You've guessed it — mother's. Even though two of them are now almost men. Why should that be? He may say that he's pretty busy; but I haven't noticed that mother is exactly idle."

"Evidently you feel that, in his place, you'd do differently?"

"Here's what I think I'd do when one of them started for college, school or camp. I think I'd say: 'Boy, we're going to miss you. It's going to be a little lonesome here, evenings. If you could manage to send an occasional letter or telephone call, the same would be gratefully received. We're still interested in every little thing that concerns you—your studies, your sports, your teachers, your food, your chums, your reactions to life as you meet it.

"How about at least one letter a week to your mother, and one or two telephone calls to me here at home? I don't like to write letters in long hand, and if I dictated replies on the letterhead of the Complex Architectural and Engineering Corporation they'd sound—well, dictated. And I don't want to call you up, because I might do so at an inopportune moment.

"But why can't you call us up? You know our number. Just tell the operator to reverse the charge. Never mind if there's nothing in particular to talk about. It will be worth the cost just to hear your voice.

"And then I think I'd add something like this: 'Maybe I can still help you in your studies, although I'm pretty rusty. I don't want to do your thinking for you, but I wouldn't mind helping you do it if you find yourself confused or baffled. Your instructor may ask you for a thesis on the N. R. A. or the textile code and you may not have at hand trade association reports or trade publications such as come to my desk. I'd be glad, and a little bit flattered, if you asked me to help you.'"

"What about girls doing likewise?"

100 JEWS SLAIN IN NEW ARAB POGROMS

marauders cut both breasts off one girl and left her to die.

Many of the victims were money lenders. It seems the Arabs "paid off" their debts by breaking into the houses of their Jewish creditors under cover of the riot and murdering them in cold blood.

Some 40 suspects among the Arab population were arrested. Authorities are taking the most stringent measures to prevent recurrence of the riots when the victims are buried.

NEW RIOTING STARTS

The riots were recurrent and time and again when the authorities thought they had things quiet, bands of Moslems would gather and perpetrate another outrage on the Jews. The riots were the latest in a chronicle of anti-Jewish violence that goes back for centuries in the history of Algeria.

Severe fighting began when the enraged Mohammedans invaded the Ghetto district after a Jewish soldier was charged with entering a Mosque and insulting worshipping Moslems.

The rioting Mohammedans set afire Jewish houses and shops, dragging men, women and children into the streets and stabbing and beating them to death or insensibility.

QUELL RIOTS

The fighting lasted 36 hours before it was finally quelled by troops and French reserves, who were rushed to the scene from Algiers.

bitter hatred between the rival factions, authorities feared the rioting might be renewed.

Indescribable scenes of terror and bitterness prevailed as the Moslems, armed with revolvers, blackjacks and Arab knives, attacked the homes of leading Jews in Constantinople. Desperately trying to defend themselves, the Jews barricaded their doors and windows against the attack.

Then the Mohammedans set fire to the homes of the Jews, shooting and stabbing the victims as they rushed from the flames and smoke-filled houses.

CRY 'DEATH TO JEWS'

A battalion of Senegalese troops, a company of gendarmes and hundreds of police surrounded the town as firemen brought from Algiers battled the flames, extinguishing them only after overcoming great difficulties.

For more than 24 hours the rioters held the city, keeping all persons off the street and defying the attempts of authorities to restore order.

At the center of the town, flames 50 feet high ate through the burning houses and illuminated the Ghetto, revealing ghastly scenes as the Moslems danced about bloodthirstily and sang:

"Death to the Jews!"

Japs Rescue Three Americans, Adrift

Tokio, Aug. 7 (AP)—The rescue of three Americans—two women and a man—who had drifted on the Pacific ocean in their sailing vessel, with its mast broken, since June 24, was reported to the United States consulate today.

The Japanese ship Koshu called at Isolated Feys Island, near Yap, July 20, and rescued the three. They are:

William L. Tewaco, a painter; Mrs. Tewaco, a writer; Miss Marion Phillips, a nurse.

Radio Phone at Taunton Succeeds

Taunton, Aug. 7—Allison R. Macomber and John B. Tracy, Jr., have completed the first successful air to ground radio-phone test in Taunton.

Macomber, a passenger in a plane communicated with Tracy, who was stationed on Prospect Hill. Both young men are experts in the amateur radio field.

$600 Jewels Lost in Nantasket Sand

There is buried treasure in the sands of Nantasket. According to police, Louis Savarese, of Gloversville, N. Y., reported he had lost rings, valued at $600, on the beach there, near the bathhouses.

An engagement ring, set with a one carat diamond, and a five diamond wedding ring constitute the loss.

Shoe Workers' "Holiday"

LOUISE KEEFE MRS. MARY MAGEE

Louise Keefe of Lynn, left, a shoe worker, and Mrs. Mary McGee, business agent for the Stitchers' Local 12 of the United Shoe and Leather Workers' Union at Lynn, are checking off the factories that have not yet signed the new agreement. Thousands of Lynn shoe workers gathered on the Lynn Common yesterday to begin a "general holiday." More than 6000 workers intend to strike until all factories fall in line with the agreement. Fourteen factories have refused to sign thus far. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

(What Hollywood is doing to meet the nationwide campaign for "Clean Movies" will be told in two stories, the first of which follows.)

By TED SMITS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Hollywood, Aug. 7—Production is proceeding briskly and smoothly in Hollywood despite the fact its product faces a possible boycott threat.

There has been no shutdown, no wholesale dropping of stars, nor other tremendous upheaval.

But there have been several major operations on productions already completed, and the disinfecting process is proceeding with regards to those being readied for the making.

TITLES CALMED DOWN

Even the titles of movies are being denatured.

Make no mistake, Hollywood is taking the situation seriously.

And if any studio for a moment lapses, Joseph I. Breen, assistant to Will Hays, the "movie czar," and now the one-man censor board of Hollywood, sends the product right back for laundering.

Already Hollywood is facetiously dubbing films "E. B." and "A. B."—"Before Breen" and "After Breen."

MAE WEST'S NEW FILM

In the three weeks since it was ordered that no Hollywood product can be shown without a "certificate of purity"—that formal announcement regarding compliance with the movie code that you are now seeing just before the title of a picture is shown—Breen and his staff have approved 69 feature films, 37 short subjects and four serials.

HARLOW IS TAMED

Probably one of the most serious problems any studio has had to face is at Paramount. Since Mae West's "It Ain't No Sin" was flatly banned by New York censors, it has been re-monickered and remade as "The Belle of the Nineties" and, its final revision completed, is expected to be approved shortly.

Every effort is being made to eliminate from this picture anything that might make it objectionable.

Even the final title, "Belle of the Nineties" started as "Belle of the Gay Nineties" but the "gay" was dropped as being, well, just a little too gay.

Many sequences have been retaken, and the plot changed at several vital points, but Mae West still is there, as curvey as ever.

Jean Harlow had her troubles, too, her "Girl From Missouri" started out as "Born to be Kissed," but that was quickly discarded. Several scenes were retaken and lines eliminated, and the final approved product is now on the market.

STRAIGHT AND NARROW

An historical spectacle, Marlene Dietrich in "The Scarlet Empress," the story of Catherine the Great of Russia, was easily remedied by eliminating one scene that showed, in quick flashes, the cruelty of the Russian regime of Catherine's day.

The Hayes office is attacking the problem at its source, as well as insisting on approval of the finished product. Every script must be submitted to Breen before production can start.

All in all, Hollywood is treading a straight and narrow path, anxious to redeem itself in the eyes of the public.

(Editor's Note:—Tomorrow's concluding article on the cleanup campaign in Hollywood outlines the radical change in plot trends undergone in the past few weeks.)

Climb in Window Breaks Man's Arm

An attempt to enter his home through a window sent Chester Mazur, 27, of Boston street, Dorchester to City hospital today suffering from a fractured arm and serious cuts.

According to police, Mazur slipped as he was attempting to gain entrance through the window on the third floor.

Falls From Horse, Girl Badly Hurt

Thrown to the ground in her first horseback riding lesson, Miss Elizabeth Wessling, 20, of Hillside road, Watertown, is at City Hospital today, suffering from a fractured skull and other injuries.

According to authorities, the accident occurred while Miss Wessling was riding with her instructor in the Fenway.

ERA Heads Plan Home Job Contact

In an attempt to spare relief recipients the expense of coming into the city, an ERA project to create welfare stations in outlying districts of Boston is under consideration.

We believe that within a very few years the public will INSIST ON IRRADIATED MILK just as they have PASTEURIZED MILK. We propose to use these columns to inform the public of the findings and discoveries of the eminent scientists and physicians who have developed and now recommend IRRADIATED MILK.

YOUR BEST FOOD Made Better

Milk, for thousands of years, has been the best food known to mankind. It is the most nearly perfect food because it contains some of all the known nutritional factors. Science made milk safe, providing protection which is responsible for saving the lives of 1000 babies every day in this country.

Now again science takes a hand. For a baby's diet must contain Vitamin 'D' sufficient to assure the development of strong, sturdy bones and to aid in forming and nourishing hard, sound teeth. Lack of this Vitamin causes rickets . . . the most prevalent disease among babies . . . resulting in faulty development of bones and handicapping the teeth.

Milk, our best food, the most universally used in the feeding of babies, can contain enough Vitamin 'D' to prevent rickets. Whiting Milk Companies,

BY IRRADIATION

(exposing milk to ultra-violet light)—enrich milk with enough Vitamin 'D' to prevent rickets.

We Grown-ups

need Sunshine Vitamin 'D,' too . . . it isn't just for the kids. Vitamin 'D' is necessary for us because, together with calcium and phosphorus, it's a highly important agent for taking care of the constantly renewing tooth and bone structure taking place in our bodies throughout life!

Mother . . . Dad . . . put Irradiated Milk on your daily diet, as well as that of the children! It's richer in food value than ordinary milk . . . drink it: use it on cereals, desserts; cook with it. The Vitamin 'D' is not reduced by heating . . . the fine natural flavor of the milk is not changed.

All Grown-ups . . . remember! Irradiated Milk helps to prevent under-nutrition resulting from lack of Sunshine Vitamin 'D'.

Ask Your Doctor!

Now- one quart a day of WHITING'S IRRADIATED MILK

Prevents Rickets

and provides practically all the calcium, phosphorus, and Vitamin 'D' needs of children and adults throughout life. By irradiation its flavor is in no way affected. The milk is merely exposed in a thin film to ultra-violet rays.

This seal denotes that our Irradiated Milk and the advertising claims for it are accepted by the American Medical Association, Committee on Foods.
Irradiated with ultra-violet rays under license by the Wisconsin Alumni Research Foundation, under the Steenbock Patent (U. S. Patent No. 1680818).

By Betty Alden

WHERE OTHERS HAVE VENTURED, timidly, Mrs. Larz Anderson has trod boldly with the conviction of one whose ancestors fought for freedom and equality in this land...an American with burning fires of patriotism and justice lighting her life, she has, with a few bold strokes, painted a picture of our early struggles during the period of slavery with fervor and understanding...

MRS. LARZ ANDERSON

In the past two decades she has contributed songs and stories to delight the children in all of us...she has told the tales of her adventures as she traveled around the globe, and has given us two fantasies, Marina and Dick Whittington, which were artistic successes last season...

"Freedom," her new presentation, is the most ambitious venture of her career and it has created widespread appreciation. Surely the large and fashionable audience who witnessed it last evening on its premiere at the Fo'cas'le, Hotel Rockmere, in Marblehead, went home filled with renewed pride in our country and pleased with the simple romance which ran like a golden thread through the pattern of the piece.

Based on Navy Hero

AGAINST A TAPESTRY OF night, spangled with stars, and festooned with the myriad lights of the harbor, the action of the play was set...a naval play, with Commodore George Hamilton Perkins, Mrs. Anderson's father, as the hero. A bevy of society girls stood at attention on the campus at Annapolis while the midshipmen were graduated in the 1850's...Polly and Isabel Gardiner, cousins of Mrs. Anderson, were charming Southern belles in hoop skirts and crinoline...we glimpsed pretty Lily Warren, debutante daughter of the Bayard Warrens, in bouffant gown and parasol...Mr. and Mrs. Warren were present to see their attractive bud in this New Orleans bouquet.

Phyllis Forbes was in this group, as was Nancy Shaw, Helen Bradshaw and Lillian Munson...

The Congo scene in Africa where the Prince of Slavers journeyed to get his human cargo, was very realistic...a colored cast performed weird dances before their tribal king and their costumes (what there were of them) were designed to scare the devil, we imagine. Mostly hieroglyphics in white chalk on bronzed bodies...It was daring and well done.

Mrs. Anderson Reigns Supreme

A GROUP OF WELL-KNOWN blossoms of other years ushered the throng to their seats...Rose Gordon Stearns wore a delectable ice-blue chiffon gown, soft and trailing...Pretty Lindy Watson looked like a Madonna in the virginal white chiffon with cowl neckline...Barbara Raton was a warm red rose in her scarlet gown which set off her raven tresses...

Mrs. Anderson, appropriately gowned in the American beauty shade of chiffon worn with a white velvet wrap, was Her Serene Highness in spite of first nights, distinguished guests, much confusion and excitement...Admiral and Mrs. Harris Laning were among the notables present, as were Commander and Mrs. Harlow Kays and Captain Herbert Kays, Captain and Mrs. Blackburn and Commander Penn and others representing the Navy whom we did not know...Mr. and Mrs. Anderson gave an informal reception after the performance in their honor...

Many drove from nearby towns to attend this social event ...we glimpsed Mrs. Henry Mason from Manchester, Mrs. Francis Lowell Burnett with Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Jr., her brother and sister-in-law...Mr. and Mrs. James M. Hunnewell and daughter Caroline, Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Stewart and their daughter, Mrs. Lawrence Black, Mrs. William Duncklee and her sister, Miss Gertrude Sands...

We were pleased to meet Susan Dalton, daughter of the Philip Daltons of Milton, a magnetic maiden in mermaid green crepe and the merry Dalton smile.

Frances Fabyan was a picture in chocolate brown organdy, her light curls tied up with a brown riband...

All Happy for Charity

JANE BOGARDUS, a little more serious than when she danced into the social spotlight, wore a warm white velvet wrap ...It was a clear, cool evening, just right for sitting about with a cozy cloak on...

A debutante of last year in tropical printed silk was Anne Upton, sister of the talented and popular Marian Upton Terry... Rosmand Bartlett was in the sophisticated black satin of the mode and Leonora Kimball's dove-grey polka-dotted satin was lovely...

Martha Rogerson's calm good looks was accentuated by a cool green frock...and dainty Mary Haskell enhanced her black eyes and dark tresses with red velvet...

Like an evening zephyr, Eleanor Morss looked as though she might blow away in sea green organdy . . . and Peggy Lamson was adorable in her evening frillies . . . Sylvia Smith and Helen Shepard thought it was "more darned fun" to assist, especially with colorful uniforms as background . . . and we heard many of the girls who assist at the Children's Island, which benefits by this presentation, remark that it was grand to do it for the Island as they very much needed the money . . .

Miss Rose Zulalian made the evening complete by singing the Star Spangled Banner . . . we know of no one who can render this stirring piece so well . . . as Miss Eleanor Pomeroy stood on a pedestal in the inspiring role of Freedom.

Shaw Play Is Success

The South Shore Players are reviving this week one of George Bernard Shaw's most successful comedies "You Never Can Tell" under the direction of Alexander Dean. The opening performance last evening was greeted with thunderous applause.

The Cohasset summer population was well represented, although due to a full social calendar last evening, the audience was smaller than usual on Mondays.

Maine Girl Is Bride

Castine, Me., Aug. 7—Julia Hutchins Faulkner of Keene, N. H., and Professor Albert Frederick Hill of Yale university were married here in a quiet home ceremony.

The wedding took place at the summer home of the bride's brother, Richard M. Faulkner, the Rev. G. M. Brinley of Castine officiating. The single ring service was used and the bridal couple was unattended. Only immediate members of the family were present.

BERT LAHR IS "SUPERMAN" IN SHUBERT SHOW -:- WODEHOUSE COMEDY DUE

Comedian Shows New Talents in "Life Begins at 8:40"; Success of Musical Seen

By GEORGE HOLLAND

The makings of New York's first musical hit of the season came to Boston last night at the Shubert theater, under the copy-cat title, "Life Begins at 8:40"; under the far-flung aegis of the Messrs. Shubert, the guiding hand of John Murray Anderson and the strain of a first night on any stage.

"Life Begins at 8:40," a revue in two acts and in about half the skits, songs and dances which have been rehearsed and are available for the culling process necessary to the success of all lavish musical shows, entertained me completely. Bert Lahr has been holding out on us, his dear public. A stammer, a stutter, a brain, a bag of comic tricks, and a line was about the sum of talent Mr. Lahr has been permitted to give off under his former producers. Was Zelda George White and Aarons and Freedley? (What, by the way, has become of Aarons and Freedley?) You will remember the very funny Mr. Lahr in "Hold Everything." He had his limitations of role.

George Holland

In "Life Begins at 8:40," irregardless of a charming young man named Ray Bolger who is a great dancer and a fine actor and a horrible singer, Mr. Lahr is so good, so versatile, so completely the master of his audience, that he comes very near to seeming great.

He Does Everything

He plays a plumber, a detective, a Briton after the type of a Noel Coward characterization, a mayor of New York, and a human gelding. As the last, abetted by Mr. Bolger, he is perfect. Not the real Mr. Lahr, please be sure to understand.

To this observer, a bit out of observing practice because of the long theatrical drought, Mr. Lahr was indisputably the chief asset of "Life Begins at 8:40." I should force him to share honors with Mr. Bolger, Lucile Gear and many have not nor will not agree with the last observation—and with the costume designers, a few of them including Kiviette and Joe Reynolds.

John Murray Anderson, that ingenious, mannerly and tasteful stager of big revues, will get in his licks toward the future success of "Life Begins at 8:40" Beginning today at rehearsals, Mr. Anderson and Albert Johnson, the stage-lighting man, have been pre-occupied with the task of introducing a new form of decor in revue-staging. It—the decor—consists of placing a merry-go-round in the center of the stage the better to place effectively th essortment of gorgeous choryphees the Messrs Shubert have managed to engage as decoration for "Life Begins at 8:40."

Ray Bolger "Clicks"

Personally, I didn't place so much stock in the merry-go-round. Stage pictures and the Weidman dancers bore me to brandy.

But Mr. Lahr. Long may he rave. When he discards a sketch called "The Great Barrington," all about a detective, his material will be cut to his order, with no further shortening. Or, so I think.

Ray Bolger is lordly. The folks loved him from his first entrance, and none can gainsay that this appearance was aided by the most promising soubrette since Hanah Williams, a small lass named Dixie Dunbar.

It is silly to review a revue, scene by scene. One is bound to mention the music, or score. I have been hearing about this score, by Harold Arlen, for weeks. I was disappointed. The Harold Arlen for my money is the young genius who wrote "Stormy Weather," and "Let's Fall in Love." In "Life Begins at 8:40," Mr. Arlen has been influenced, I think by his lyric writers. One is Ira Gershwin, and the equally talented, E. Y. Harburg. What those boys did for Miss Gear in a thing called "Paramount-Public-Roxy Rose," and for Mr. Lahr in a thing called "Things" was something to write Junior Laemmle in regard to, or about.

What they seem to have done to Mr. Arlen—who has done a bit George Gershwin—is pretty pitiable. The show can be a smashing success, and probably will be.

Perfect Composure for a Perfect Pair

Ricardo Cortez and Barbara Robbins are caught by the camera in smiling repose. But don't let them fool you, because there's plenty of excitement in their newest film, "Hat, Coat and Glove," which comes to the Keith-Boston on Thursday.

New Pictures for Keiths

Censor-proof pictures will be the rule for the coming production schedule at the RKO studios. The ultimatum has been delivered and 12 pictures being placed before the megaphones and microphones during the current month are all considered air-tight from a censorship angle.

The 12 pictures are "By Your Leave," with Skeets Gallagher; "Anne of Green Gables," with Anne Shirley and Tom Brown; "The Little Minister," starring Katharine Hepburn, with John Beal; "Let's Get Married" and "Radio City Revels" starring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers; "Sea Girl"; "Romance in Manhattan," starring Francis Lederer; "Kentucky Kernels" with Wheeler and Woolsey; "Dangerous Corner," with Virginia Bruce; "Wednesday's Child," with Frankie Thomas and Karen Morley; "Laddie Boy" and "The Silver Streak."

Herrera Arrest as Slayer Sought

Havana, Aug. 7—The Cuban government has requested Republic of Santo Domingo authorities to arrest General Alberto Herrera on five charges of murder.

Herrera, who fled from Cuba when the Machado government was overthrown, is said by Cuban officials to have found a refuge in the Dominican Republic.

H. M. Addison Loew Manager

Taking over the reins as eastern division manager for the Loew Theatres, H. M. Addison has recently established his headquarters in Boston. He succeeds William A. Downe, who has been transferred to the executive offices of Loew's, Inc., in New York. Mr. Addison comes to his post in Boston from Cleveland, where he has had charge of the group of Loew Theatres in that city for the past four years. He has been associated with the Loew organization for seven years, serving in various executive capacities in Rochester, Baltimore and Pittsburgh. His entire theatrical career covers more than 20 years, and he is well known in theatre and motion pictures fields all over the United States.

H. M. Addison

He will have complete supervision of the Loew theatres in Boston, Providence, Rochester, Syracuse, Buffalo, London (Ont.), and Montreal.

Rev. Robert White Gets Reserve Post

Washington, Aug. 7—The promotion of the Rev. Robert J. White, former assistant district attorney of Middlesex County, Mass., to the rank of lieutenant commander was announced today by the District of Columbia Naval Reserve Battalion.

Father White is now professor of criminal law and legal ethics at Catholic University, and has been in the past a naval officer, lawyer, public official and professor as well as a priest.

Shaw Comedy at Cohasset

"You Never Can Tell," George Bernard Shaw's satirical comedy of modern family life and its intellectual conflicts, was presented last evening at the Cohasset town hall by the South Shore Players.

For its production Mr. Alexander Mann assembled an excellent cast, which made the most of the sharp edge lines of one of the lighter and most enjoyable of the Shaw plays. "You Never Can Tell" bears the test of time more seriously than one might suppose. The amusing conflicts between the intellectual Gloria and her clever and philandering admirer, the "unrupenny" dentist, Mr. Valentine, are the same skillful examples of Shavian repartee, and last evening were played with zest and distinction by Jane Kenyon (Mrs. Kenyon Nicholson) and Donald MacDonald.

Aldrich Bowker

Ruth Hammond and Alan Hewitt had the role of the irrepressible twins, and an admirable bit of character work was turned in by Thomas W. Rose, veteran actor of many pleasant memories, in the part of the waiter.

Other characterizations were turned in by Aldrich Bowker, Mary Wilsey, Carroll Ashburn, Norman Wright and Gordon Gould.

'Piccadilly Jim' to Be Brought Back to Screen in David Selznick Production

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1935, Universal Service Inc.)

Los Angeles, Aug. 7—"Piccadilly Jim," novel that put P. G. Wodehouse in the class of successful novelists, will be returned to the screen by David O. Selznick. I say returned because it was David's father, L. J. Selznick, far-seeing in motion picture methods, who made a silent version of this same "Piccadilly Jim" in 1920.

It will be a far different picture that David will produce for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He will convert the Wodehouse comedy into a musical with those two wits, Marc Connelly and Robert Benchley, writing the adaptation. Robert Montgomery is nominated for the delectable role of Wodehouse's hero.

Louella O. Parsons

William A. Brady, pioneer stage producer, arrived in Hollywood with a trunkful of plays he has produced during his long and successful career. He is returning to New York but he is coming back to complete the deals that he has started with several film producers. With all the hue and cry for clean pictures W. A. feels that he has in that well-stocked trunk, a solution for the unhappy producers who are faced with the vexatious problem of pleasing both the public and the censores. Among the Brady plays are "Bunty Pulls the Strings," "Way Down East," "Her Majesty," all the Clyde Fitch plays and many others.

Claudette Colbert's delightful mother is in France right in the middle of all the current conflict.

Claudette Colbert

Be coming panicky after reading of Hitler's arguments with Mussolini and Austrian civil strife, Claudette cabled Mrs. Colbert to return home. Maybe it's just as well Miss Colbert is coming back to see that her daughter doesn't work herself to death. With out any breathing space Claudette moves from Universal to Paramount to play the illiterate dancer in Mel Baker's and Jack Kirkland's play, "The Gilded Lily."

Fanny Brice will play herself all right in the "Ziegfeld Follies" but she will play her favorite role in the east. She signed her contract with the stipulation that all filming must be done either on good old Broadway or Chicago where she will reopen with a 1934 stage edition of "The Follies" in a few weeks.

A Line or Two

Polly Moran's handsome bridegroom, Martin Malone, is saying goodbye to law and his ambitions to become a great jurist. Polly has other plans for him. She thinks with his looks and his physique, he ought to be another Clarke Gable in the movies. The New York telephone lines were kept open by Joan Crawford, waiting for news of Katherine Albert's baby. Miss Albert is married to Dale Unson, magazine writer, and she is herself a fan magazine writer. She was critically ill and was in the hospital many hours before her little daughter, Joan Crawford Unson, was born. A wire from Jack Dempsey says Hannah, the baby and he are all doing nicely. Mrs. Dempsey was also in the hospital many hours before young Miss Dempsey decided to make her appearance. My hat is off to Kathleen Howard. Formerly a grand opera singer and then fashion editor of Harper's Bazar, she has come out to Hollywood and made a place for herself. She will have the second feminine lead in "Orchids and Onions."

Stars Shine at Boston's First Night

By ANN AMES

Despite its brilliance, not all the sparkle at the Shubert last evening for the world premiere of "Life Begins at 8:40" were on the stage. There were stars in the audience aplenty, and not in several blue moons has Boston seen such a gathering of theater notables. They were as prevalent as pigeons on the Common, and if you turned around all of a sudden there was Harpo Marx or Harry Richman or George White right under your very nose. Between the acts you might have met either of the Messrs. Shubert—J. J. or Lee—Arch Selwyn, Ray Henderson, Lew Brown, Lawrence Weber, Harry Kannen, Harry Kaufman, Louis Shur, Henry Spitzer, George Wood, Harold Franklin or Victor Mizelli, who is art director for Radio City. Madame Marzenauer, very grand and very much the prima donna, was there to see the debut of her daughter Adrienne. Just in case you're not familiar with all the shining lights we've mentioned, they're all of the greatest importance in the dramatic and musical world. "Life Begins at 8:40" brought them all to Boston, to add their glittering presence to quite the most gala opening the home town has turned out.

Found, the perfect secretary! Last evening a tall, slender and striking girl, garbed in the patriotic draperies of a symbolic Freedom appeared at the close of Mrs. Larz Anderson's play "Freedom," which brought socialites and celebrities to the Ritzcastle at Marblehead. She is Miss Eleanor Pomeroy, and although she started out in life to be an actress, what with one thing and another she eventually found herself personal and private secretary to Mrs. Larz Anderson. Unlike most erstwhile aspirants for dramatic honors, Miss Pomeroy wouldn't change places with the biggest star back of the footlights, even though she did step out of character last night and symbolize the spirit of America. She's perfectly happy with Mrs. Anderson's secretary, so the virus of the show business for once failed to get its victim.

CHAPTER 108

Madge Wearies of the Battle in Defense of Avis Arlen and Turns Her Energies to Saving the Lovers' Honeymoon Plans

THERE WAS that in Philip Veritzen's voice, as he asked me if he were so fearsome as to cause me to shiver, which crystallized my disinclination further to champion the cause of Avis Arlen. I reminded myself once more that something far more important than her fate was at stake this evening. If there were any chance of appealing to Philip Veritzen's chivalry, as this softened tone in his voice indicated, I ought to use it in the attempt to save the original honeymoon plans of Mary and Noel from being spoiled by the flamboyant magnificence of Noel's father.

"No, indeed," I told him mendaciously. "I can't imagine your being fearsome any more than I can picture you as being deliberately cruel or unjust to anyone. So I mustn't worry my head about Miss Arlen any longer. I think I safely can leave her to you."

BACK TO CHIBBAGE.

"Thank you," he said inscrutably, just as Mary appeared in the doorway.

"Aunt Lillian said to tell you that the game is nearly over, and she thinks we'd better all be in evidence in the living room when Granzie begins to sit up and take notice again."

Mr. Veritzen sprang to his feet. "I'll be there immediately," he said. "Thank you for arranging everything." He emphasized the words with an impressive little bow to me and was gone, while Mary looked at me roguishly.

"He little dreams that you're not through arranging interviews," she commented, and I smiled at her, hoping that she did not guess the tremors behind the smile.

"Here's to the success of our attempt!" I said, kissing the bright face in near to mine. "Run along back now, dear, and I'll come in presently. Mother Graham thinks I'm engaged with Katie, you know, and it would never do for me to come back in there with you. She is sharp enough to make five and a half or even six out of two and two."

Mary nodded sapiently.

"She's a hard old dame to fool, is my Granzie. Well, I'll be seein' you."

MOTHER GRAHAM SUMMONS

I waited until I was sure she was back in the living room, then made my way to the kitchen, finding it in the usual spotless order in which Mary Graham leaves her domain at night.

I filled the teakettle with fresh water from the tap and set it over a slow flame on the gas stove. Then I measured coffee into a big pot, set some crackers ready to toast, and arranged on a tray some of the delicious little cakes which Katie always keeps in the larder. When I had arranged plates, cups and saucers ready for serving, I hurried back into the living room, finding, to my relief, that Mother Graham was so absorbed in the victory which she had just won over my father that she paid no attention whatever to my entrance into the room.

"Now I'm ready for the game you promised me," she said to Philip Veritzen, and when he had indicated in mathematical the vicinity of his inexpability to give her an even game, he firmly yielded, and sat down opposite her.

I had no knowledge of Mr. Veritzen's degree of skill in cribbage, but of one thing I was certain. My mother-in-law would win that game, no matter on which side of the board lay the greater skill or luck.

When at last she rose from the apparently close contest a winner, she was radiant with pleasure, but so fatigued that she declined to stay down for the coffee which I proposed. She insisted that she must go directly to her room, as I needed her what I should send her—coffee, chocolate or hot milk for a "nightcap"—she lowered her voice to a whisper as she replied.

"Hot milk and the crackers please; but bring it yourself, I won't keep you but a minute."

With Lillian's aid I managed to slip away before we served the coffee, and took my mother-in-law's sleeping draught to her. I found her already in bed, and motioning me to set the small tray down on the table by her bed, she went to the point at once.

"Margaret," she said impressively, "do you know what Mr. Veritzen has planned for those children?"

VERITZEN FINDS AN ALLY

I knew better than to confess complete knowledge.

"Only a vague idea," I said. "He said something about a motor car."

"The very finest of its kind on the market," she reiterated, "and a marvelous fur motor coat for Mary, and a list of impressive social engagements at the homes of some of the most distinguished people in the country. Also, a week at Mr. Veritzen's Palm Beach villa, to say nothing of a check for three thousand dollars just for expenses.

"It is rare," I answered, knowing full well that I could have been summoned only for the recital of Philip Veritzen's generosity.

"Rare!" she snapped. "I don't say so! I tried to express what I felt about it to Mr. Veritzen, and what do you think he said to me?"

"I can't imagine," I told her, as she paused dramatically.

"That he was afraid my plan didn't suit the young people, that they were disappointed in something. Now, I was too tired to speak to Mary myself, but I want you to talk to her before Mr. Veritzen goes home, and have her clear up that misunderstanding. He must be mistaken. No girl in her senses would object to a program like that!"

A Dash of Scotch With Fall Tweeds

HIGHLAND caps, an advance fall fashion, are setting young New Yorkers agog, we hear. Quick on the fashion trigger, here is a Scotch cap to be crocheted lovingly by hand, for the devil-may-care touch fall tweeds seem to need. It is the American cousin of the Glengarry, with a family resemblance to the overseas cap. If you want to be really Scottish, turn the cap around and wear the tails in the back. Because it is the sort of thing that is casual, to be pulled on without benefit of mirror at any old time, it will appeal to the college girl. Several caps in different colors will pep up the favorite twin sweater set. If you would like directions for crocheting this Scotch bonnet, write to Annice Brink, Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

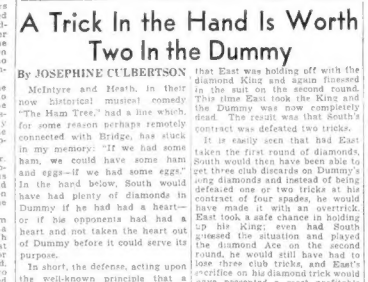
A Trick In the Hand Is Worth Two In the Dummy

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

McIntyre and Heath, in their now historical musical comedy "The Ham Tree," had a line which, for some reason perhaps remotely connected with Bridge, has stuck in my memory: "If we had some ham, we could have some ham and eggs—if we had some eggs." In the hand below, South would have had plenty of diamonds in Dummy if he had had a heart—or if his opponents had had a heart and not taken the heart out of Dummy before it could serve its purpose.

In short, the defense, acting upon the well-known principle that a trick in the bush (speaking, of course, of the Declarer's tricks) is worth two in the hand, succeeded in hashing three perfectly good tricks to a desert island, where they were as useful to Declarer as they would have been on Mars. South was the Declarer at the contract of four spades.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the heart Queen and South quite properly won this trick in his own hand, keeping the King in Dummy as a possible reentry card for the diamond suit. He now laid down his King of spades and West won the trick with the Ace. West at this point returned another heart, realizing the importance of removing the heart King as a sure re-entry to Dummy.

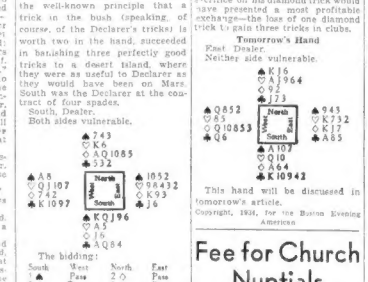
South now proceeded to draw the remaining trumps and then led the diamond Jack. West of course played low, a low card was played from Dummy and East refused to play his King. Obviously at this point if the Declarer guesses the situation correctly h can avoid the loss of a diamond trick. However, he has absolutely no way, as the cards lie, of winning more than one club trick, and the contract must be defeated by the loss of three club tricks and one spade.

South of course did not know that East was holding off with the diamond King and again finessed in the suit on the second round. This time East took the King and the Dummy was now completely dead. The result was that South's contract was defeated two tricks.

It is easily seen that had East taken the first round of diamonds, South would then have been able to get three club discards on Dummy's long diamonds and instead of being defeated one or two tricks at his contract of four spades, he would have made it with an overtrick. East took a safe chance in holding up his King; even had South guessed the situation and played the diamond Ace on the second round, he would still have had to lose three club tricks, and East's sacrifice on his diamond trick would have presented a most profitable exchange—the loss of one diamond trick to gain three tricks in clubs.

Tomorrow's Hand

East, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



This hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Fee for Church Nuptials

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married in September and would appreciate your help in planning my wedding. It is to be an afternoon wedding, in church, either informal or semi-formal, followed by a buffet luncheon. What donation would be appropriate to give the clergyman for an affair of this kind? We have but a small income and cannot afford very much, but would like to do the correct thing.

Dear M.: Under these circumstances five dollars or 10 dollars, whichever you think appropriate to your budget, would be suitable. There is no rule about this fee, and it ranges from five dollars to hundreds, according to our situation in life and to our native generosity.

Gold Wing Earrings

ALL may not be gold that glitters—but if it isn't real gold then it's bound to be a pretty good imitation, for gold costume jewelry is due for a tremendous vogue. Smart women are accenting their costumes with wide gold bracelets, lacquered with black, or heavy links of gold. These bracelets are usually worn in pairs, one on either wrist. Winged earrings, worn on the top of the ear instead of the lobe, are an attractive and unusual ear ornament. Gold clips do duty on everything from the brief to the pump, while broad twisted bands of gold are worn on the fingers.

Classic Simplicity Is Smart

By MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERN 9084

Frocks that you make in August should have possibilities of Autumn wear—and this one has! Make it in a dark color and you will be delighted to have it to wear under a coat. In that case it might be best to use the long sleeve version you see in the little sketch. If, however, it is to be just one more summer frock you will find the short sleeves of the large dropped collar and a trifle quicker to make. The frock has good lines and the graceful revers are both slenderizing and flattering. The double pleat in the skirt gives ample fullness. The buttons are for trim only.

Pattern 9084 may be ordered only in sizes 16, 18, 20, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 36 requires 3¼ yards 39-inch fabric and ⅝ yard contrasting.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for any Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number and size of each pattern.

How would you like a book of fashions designed for sun-drenched days and starlit nights? It tells you about, and has pictures of everything from a wedding dress to a garden frock. It shows you the latest fabrics, and talks wisely about beauty. In short . . . It's a treasure! It's the summer edition of the Marian Martin Pattern Book and it costs 15 cents. The book and pattern together are 25 cents.

Send your order to Boston American, Pattern Department, 232 W. 18th street, New York, N. Y.

Tactful or Dull Mind Needed by Bride

By Sheilah Graham

I'VE NEVER had a mother-in-law. I was just going to add "Thank Goodness," but thought it might be a better idea to write the story first and then judge whether the afterthought is deserved.

Pretty little Mrs. Clendenin J. Ryan thinks it is. To say that she loathes the whole tribe of mothers-in-law is to put it too mildly. They could all frizzle up and she wouldn't shed a single tear. She'd laugh.

In case you don't know, Mrs. Ryan is having a spot of trouble with her husband. To be more blunt, the handsome LaGuardia executive has brought a suit for the annulment of his marriage to the young, beauteous Viennese, the former Countess Marie Ann Wurmbrand-Stuppach.

"He's a nice fellow," said Marie recently, speaking of the lad she once loved and married, to the International News Service reporter in Salzburg, "but he is too much under the influence of his mother . . . She and I did not agree, and she told him to divorce me."

With a story like this I can see it is going to be a long time before the mother-in-law bogey is scotched. And the following one won't do the cause any good either.

"POPS" IN OFTEN

She was what's known as a noble-minded woman. "Young people must not be hampered by a mother-in-law," she said to the friend who asked her why she didn't accede to her son's request to live with his new wife and him.

So she does the next best thing by popping in at all times of the day with a "My dear, I hope you didn't mind me dropping in—I was feeling lonely."

Then she proceeds—In a very noble, high-minded, sweet way, of course, to tell the harassed gal exactly what Jim likes best and what he hates most in the living line. The little bride is at present studying a book called "How to Poison a Mother-in-Law."

To meet the in-law situation adequately, both parties must have mind-of-their-own cows—or of clever diplomats.

The former so they won't notice the flirtation. The latter so that if they do, they can iron out smoothly without creating complications or worse, loss of good taste.

Read the last two words again.

Twelve Eyelets for High Cut Oxfords

THE FALL footwear just making its appearance reveals many surprises, and many new versions of old favorites. The glove fitting high cut oxford is chosen by many smart women, has risen higher, and will have as many as eight or ten eyelets. Another smart type is the Colonial tongue pump, done in kidskin with a buckle ornament at the high tongue. The "cocktail shoe," cut in rich dark kid and trimmed with metallic kid or metal eyelets, meets the demand for a dressy afternoon shoe. For wear with tweed suits this autumn, there are clever interpretations of primitive moccasin, the boucher, the Scotch ghillie and the monk shoe. Crushed and grained kids are shown for these sport types.

Rain Water Is Efficient Bleach

Question: Can you tell me of a home remedy that will bleach freckles? How can I get rid of my double chin?

M. E. G., Wakefield.

Answer: The common home treatment for bleaching freckles is the juice of fresh lemons mixed with a little good cold cream and left on the skin overnight. A solution of eight ounces of rain water and one-half ounce of borax is also good. Wash your skin twice a day with this.

Brisk spanking under your chin with a patter, or with the back of your hand, is good to reduce a double chin. At night use a good astringent. After applying them, tie up your chin with a chin strap, or strong piece of cloth.

Falling Hair

Question: My skin is very dry and my hair is oily and falling out profusely. My scalp is covered with dandruff. Please help me.

R. B., Arlington.

Answer: Try rubbing crude oil on your scalp between shampoos. A little olive oil rubbed on your skin after each washing with soap and water tends to lubricate a dry skin. Do not use strong astringents. Be sure that the cleansing cream you use contains rich oils, and never expose your skin without a protection.

"Goose Pimples"

Question: I have a perfectly clear complexion, but I am troubled by "goose-pimples" on my upper arms and legs. Could you advise me how to eliminate them?

R. G., South Boston.

Answer: Goose pimples are caused by fright, so what you have on your upper arms are not goose-pimples but a slight skin rash that frequently comes from poor circulation and a slight acid condition of the blood.

The most effective local treatment is to massage in a little hot olive oil every night. Take at least five minutes for each arm.

Even Skin Tone

Question: Although my body tans very easily, there are a few spots on my arms that remain a dead white. Is there anything that will bleach the skin to a uniform shade?

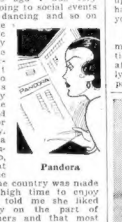
R. G. F., Boston

Answer: By washing your skin every day with a solution of hydrogen peroxide after you have cleansed it, you might possibly be able to bleach it all to one skin-tone. I would suggest staying out from under the sun while you are attempting to bleach your skin.

Pandora Tells You

DEAR PANDORA:

Some years ago I was very keen about going in for social events—a bit of dancing and so on and my husband was a little bit upset by it. He gave me to understand that the men who made this country worked all the time and had little for such frivolity. I put up a weak argument or two, saying that by the time



Pandora

I was born the country was made and it was high time to enjoy it, but she told me she liked frivolity only on the part of paid performers and the most bosses and other important men felt the same way.

So I got in the habit of staying home. Now, since our two daughters are married and have little ones, we are invited to all sorts of family and friends' parties that we did not formerly have access to. She wants to go and Go and Go.

I want to stop. How can I?

WILLIS R.

DEAR WILLIS R.:

You don't need help so much as you need concentration. Think hard and try to recall fragments of those arguments which your wife uttered and which induced you to stay home. Of course you want to see your grandchildren once in a while, but welcome the young couples to your own house if that's more convenient and keep enlightened on how to be TOO easy. It's your turn to have YOUR way. And your wife is just what your wife ordered, didn't she? Tell it to her, big boy.

Easily Prepared Treatment Acts as Astringent; Is Magical Pick-Up

(POSED BY HEATHER ANGEL)

By Juliet Shelby

THERE is nothing like a face-masque to revive the tired beauty of a woman's skin and to pep up her spirits on short notice. But let me tell you young things right now, face masques of the type I am featuring today are not for you. No girl younger than twenty-five years should even bother to read a word more of this column!

Masques of this type are strongly astringent. And because they are astringent they can quickly firm the tired, sagging muscles of the face and give your skin a radiant clarity. Ancient Egyptian princesses used masques to bring new beauty into their faces, and since that time masques have grown in popularity.

* * *

They are a boon to women of this hectic age who often find themselves without time to rest and restore their natural skin loveliness. However, women with fine, delicate skins should use masques less frequently than their sisters who have tougher, well lubricated complexions.

The masque I want to tell you about today is a marvelous pick-up after a strenuous day which has given you little time to look your best.

It comes in powder form. You mix it with a special masque lotion and apply it to your face after the skin has been thoroughly cleansed with a lotion that is part of the treatment.

Let it dry while you relax (it takes five to eight minutes) and then soften it with the cleansing lotion. With a linen towel wrung out of ice-cold water, wipe it from your face. Stimulate your face and throat by patting on the circulation lotion.

That completes the treatment, and your face takes on a new loveliness, a freshness and smoothness that, gives you new confidence with which to face the evening's program.

A set of six masques, with masque lotion, cleansing liquid and face astringent, come to you neatly packed in a glossy white box. You will want to use one soon, for the end of any season is exhausting, and your skin feels and looks the effects more quickly than you realize.

* * *

If you are interested in learning the name of this face masque and where it is sold, phone Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4000. If you prefer writing for this information send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Shelby, Boston Evening American, Boston.

MAD MILLIONS

The Newspaper Version of Famed Novel "More Money"

By CHARLES GRANT

Cathleen McCarthy, Pretty Stenographer, Secures Her Chance to Rise

(Note—The financial details contained in this novel, while purely fictional, have been testified to as accurate and convincing by B. C. Forbes, Editor of Forbes Magazine and distinguished financial writer, and by Henry F. Pringle who has recently investigated the activities of Ivar Kreuger, Hugo Stinnes and Alfred Loewenstein.)

CHAPTER I

The great Jasper H. Ingram needed money. More money. Sixty million dollars, in fact.

The amount did not startle him. His dreams were too vast to be measured in terms of dollars. Since his projects demanded more money he had but to ask and it would be produced for him. He had little reason to fear that this new financing would not be accomplished.

Yet, as he stood looking out of the window of his private office on the forty-second floor of the Ingram building, he thought for a moment of the seeming incongruity of Jasper Ingram being in need of more money. His wealth, interests and resources were so boundless. But it always had been like this, this urgent pressure for more money.

IMPULSE TO RISE

From the time he had started to make his own way, to escape from the bitterness of his early poverty needing a few dollars more a week and getting it—there was that constant and irresistible impulse to forge ahead.

He recalled now, as he recalled the time he bought a hundred dollars a month was the biggest salary in the world. Then, after a while, the feeling that if he could earn as much as ten thousand a year he would have achieved life's most bountiful promise. Only to find that wasn't so. Increasing wealth ought with it increasing demands. More money. Always more money.

How he had looked to the men with millions, envying them, fancying their problems solved . . . They were at last absolved from worries and from longing. How mistaken he had been! But when was he had ceased to think of money as money and had seen it as Power . . . the leverage with which gigantic undertakings could be swung irresistibly forward? Time, uncertain but the creative impulse back of the change, definite and obvious.

As he turned from the window his confidential secretary, Homer Alspaugh, entered the room and stood respectfully waiting the great man's command.

Take Alspaugh, thought Ingram, as he moved toward the table at which he worked—a steady, safe dependable, yes-man, getting 10,000 a year—and satisfied. Paying for a home in the suburbs for himself and his exceedingly pretty wife who was inclined to be flirtatious. What of it? Most young women were, these days. Alspaugh, Ingram was sure, had little worry about the need for more money.

MILLIONS AHEAD

After acknowledging Alspaugh's good morning greeting, Ingram said, "We can go ahead with the expansion plans. Osgood has committed his group to the flotation of a 60,000,000 bond issue. They're getting the thing now. Osgood should call any moment."

Alspaugh shook his head in profound admiration. Who but Jasper H. Ingram, in these dark days could ask for $60,000,000—and get it. But he said simply

"That's fine," Mr. Ingram. "But naturally no surprise to me."

Art, behind this lip service, entertaining though it sounded. Although felt a twinge of envy—a yearning of something surprisingly like resentment. Why should these peculiarly rich have such ease in adding to their fortunes, while such as he was always so pressed? Obviously, Ingram had not correctly analyzed his obsequious employe.

Money! More money! Jasper Ingram able to raise new millions for the expansion of vast holdings, while he, Homer Alspaugh, would have a devil of a time getting an extension of the mortgage on his home. Banks weren't renewing mortgages in these times. Not for men of his financial standing.

No worry about the need for more money, Ingram had thought. Alspaugh was constantly pressed for money. True, a few years earlier he would have thought a man should ever feel hard up on the liberal salary he was receiving. But now—oh, well, it might still be thought if Marian weren't so extravagant!

A gentle buzz from Mr. Ingram's private telephone interrupted his meditations. As he listened and watched he knew that Osgood, assistant Ingram's banker but actually his financial wheel horse, was on the wire.

"IT'S ALL SET"

"It's all set," was Ingram's only comment to Alspaugh. The fingers of his left hand drummed on the arm of his chair, his features indicated slightly, but he gave no other sign of triumph.

Alspaugh's imagination was too limited for him to grasp the tree and intricate pattern of Jasper Ingram's gigantic dreams

Jasper Ingram worked alone. All those who were associated with him—bankers and promoters and the members of his board of directors—seemed to become lesser Ingrams, but they were never admitted to his holy of holies where the fire of his unlimited ambition burned. He was a dreamer, but his dreams were practical. He kept his eyes on a vision of the future yet held his mind to the sound practical details of the immediate issue one small unit at a time.

To control power you simply owned and fight company. You reorganized or bought into a local company and formed a holding corporation. At first in the same way a dozen or more strategically located. Soon you could cover the country!

One unit at a time. A coal mine. A pipe line for oil. A pipe line for natural gas

One unit at a time. A railroad. A bus line. An air line. A Great Lakes shipping line.

One unit at a time. A small radio station. Merge it with others, make it the basis for the coming radio telephone.

Power! Transportation! Communication!

To unify and control. That was Ingram's dream. Overwhelming and simple. Holding companies. Voting trusts. Investment trusts.

To Jasper H. Ingram there was nothing complicated or involved in these ramifications. To Homer Alspaugh they simply were beyond comprehension

CALLS FOR GIRL

All Alspaugh knew was that when Ingram wanted to add to his holdings he called up Osgood, or some other banker, and got the money to carry out his plans. Poor little Alspaugh, blind to the sweep of genius, ready to think that, were he Ingram, he too could guide the destiny of great enterprise.

So for a long moment he stood there watching his chief in silence Then he asked

"Ready for a pleasant surprise, young lady? Opportunity—that's what I'm bringing you," Alspaugh said.

"Is there anything else, Mr. Ingram?"

"What say? Oh, yes. Miss Peters is away. Has cold still need some one to take dictation, more cash.)

Send me in the most intelligent girl you have—if any.' As he went out Alspaugh paid smiling tribute to the ancient jest.

Entering a big room where a dozen stenographers sat at noiseless machines, he unhesitatingly approached a girl playing over the keyboard of her typewriter with a quick, musical precision.

If Jasper Ingram had stipulated for the services of the prettiest girl, it was here that Alspaugh must have stopped. But the dark blue eyes Cathleen McCarthy raised to his held in their depths intelligence as well as beauty. Her brood brows testified to strength of character, that was saved from austerity by her firm, but kissable, lips

Not that Alspaugh was likely to reduce the appearance of any woman to such psychological confusions. No, indeed. To him, any girl with pleasing features and a good figure was "a beauty who ought to be on the stage." That's how he regarded Cathleen McCarthy, though he did acknowledge her brains.

Ready for a pleasant surprise, young lady? Opportunity—that's what I'm bringing you," he said

Cathleen didn't like Alspaugh's manner, but she favored him with an inquiring smile.

"Mr. Ingram asked me to send some one to take his letters. Miss Peters is out with a cold. Lord knows when she'll be back. A girl who could do her work and give satisfaction, well, there was no telling how far she might go. Naturally, I thought of you right away, Miss McCarthy. I've been watching your work—and you, too."

"That's nice of you," said Cathleen

Don't forget who gave you your big chance," he cautioned her as he patted her lightly on her shoulder.

Your Cooking Problems Solved

"Can you make a suggestion as to what to serve for an evening Bridge party outdoors?" Miss J. A., Dorchester.

Our refreshments we suggest that you serve a fruit punch, small fancy sandwiches with the cream cheese and the fruit in the center are most attractive cream cheese and cucumber or cream cheese and pickled watermelon rind are particularly nice. The thing to do in the summer time is to keep the refreshments as simple as possible and still attractive. You can do most of the preparation ahead of time and then set up outside of doors when the guests arrive. In the meantime keep them cool.

CAST INTO EDEN -:- By Henry C. Rowland

CHAPTER XXV

"Briefly," said Linda, "you want a man as much like yourself as is humanly possible."

He gave her a quizzical look. "How did you guess?"

"Call it female intuition. You have just described Jerome, Dr. Van Dieman."

"Jerome?"

"Yes. Lieutenant Crain. Ever since we landed on this island I've been playing Eve. But I couldn't make him play up to me as Adam. He wouldn't break into your beautiful chests and he wouldn't sample the Forbidden Fruit. I had to trick him into doing that . . ."

LOVERS' PLIGHT

"I'll tell you about it later. What you have said is more important just now—to you as well as to us."

"What I just said . . ?"

"About wanting a man to replace you, while you're in Holland. Jerome can do that. He has all points, Spanish and everything. He was a gentleman by nature and birth and tradition long before they made him an officer and a gentleman by Act of Congress. If he hadn't been, we'd be just another Adam and Eve. But he wouldn't fall for any Garden of Eden because we had nowhere to go from here."

Dr. Van Dieman looked puzzled. "I do not understand. It is natural that you two should have fallen in love, living here so intimately. It is also natural that since you are well bred young people you should have desired to preserve your self-respect. But I do not see what you mean by saying that this young man protected you both from temptation because there was no place for you to go from here."

Linda said with the candor of the modern girl: "Jerome turned down the Garden of Eden idea because we can't marry when we get back where we belong."

"Zo . . . and why not?"

"Because both our fortunes have stopped being that thing," Linda said. "The good old dividends are washed out. We're both flat. I had resigned my Navy commission last year to start a boat-building business. Now he is a gentleman of leisure. Leisure is all he's got."

"Ach . . . now I begin to understand. Jerome is . . ."

"Gosh, Doctor, don't call it that!" Jerome said disgustedly. "It was just plain common sense."

"You are right, my boy. Just plain common sense. If there is anything more noble than the common sense you stick to in face of great temptation, then I have still to find out."

Dr. Van Dieman's pure English was enriching itself a little under stress of his very human emotion. He stroked his silvery beard. "Now I see it all. Let us go aboard and breakfast. Then we can talk. You have been much better as Adam and Eve. And now I think maybe I shall be a sort of agent of God."

He seemed to be turning this idea in his mind, as if weighing any possible charge of blasphemy. Then he said. "Why not? In the life of every man he is given some time a chance to be that . . . All that is any good in any man is that part of him which is a part of God." He nodded to himself. "Which is all the more reason for giving the God that is in us a good time, when it can be done honestly."

THE BRIDE'S DRESS

"That's the trouble," Linda said. "Well then, we shall see. I ought to be sailing on the next of our vessels for Rotterdam. All that keeps me is this matter of finding the right man to replace me . . . permanently, if he makes good. As I have said it is a case of finding a square peg for a square hole, but not one that fits too snugly for a little play.

"Now put away the wedding dress, my dear, and see what you can find in the way of clothes . . . no, you may put the wedding dress in a value you will find there in the closet and bring it with you. It has never been worn . . . but that is something I am not yet ready to talk about even after 40 years. Perhaps you may soon wear it happily, and then I shall tell you. Close the house as you found it and come down to the beach and we shall get under weigh for San Cristobal."

He went out and started back toward the ravine. Jerome and Linda looked after him, then at each other.

Ten days later the new Pan Caribbean Agent General of the Van Dieman Lines said to the captain of the smart cabin cruiser:

"You are to set the Senora and myself ashore, Mateo, and return for us in a week. Then we shall go to the port of your official mission sake and taken up our official duties as per order of Doctor Van Dieman."

"But Senor," Mateo protested. "you and the Senora should have at least a cook."

SOLITUDE PREFERRED

"No, amigo mio, we prefer to be entirely alone. If we bore each other there are always the gorillas."

Mateo crossed himself. "They are not Christians, Senor . . ."

"How do you know, Mateo?" Linda asked. She had not yet changed the wedding dress in which she had gone directly from the church to the yacht, about five hours earlier in the day, at San Cristobal. "Perhaps they are angels in disguise."

Again the yacht captain crossed himself. "Por Dios, Senora, in that case the disguise at least is good. Still, it is possible. Do they not guard the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil? But such things are not for me to talk about."

Jerome and Linda stepped ashore. The boat shoved off the beach and went back to the smart expressed cruiser. She blew three blasts in salute, dipped her colors, and headed for the port of San Mateo.

Jerome picked up a suitcase and started across the beach for the mouth of the ravine. Linda walked beside him. As they entered the cool shaded tunnel of the trees she stopped.

"Wait a moment, Jerry. I can't risk tearing this lovely thing."

She slipped out of the priceless lace wedding dress, folded it carefully over her arm, then said, "All right, let's go. Now I'm back where I belong."

"You're where you belong," he agreed, 'but not back there. It's for the first time. In all your Alberto questing life."

"But I've always belonged to you, Jerry."

"True, but the title was only signed, sealed and delivered this morning in San Mateo. Dr. Van Dieman was right. I could never have graduated from the intensive course he's put me through in the past ten days if we'd been married on landing."

"No," she admitted. "You'd have been what my college psychology 'prof' called a split consciousness."

BACK IN EDEN

"Yes, and it would have just about torn me in two. Now I've got a whole week with nothing to think about but you. Then we'll go aboard the cruiser and start on a Caribbean cruise that will be about as much like the one we took aboard Tommy's yacht as working in a vineyard is like enjoying the champagne it produces."

She said happily: "Back again in Eden, with the Lord's permission to eat all of the fruit of the tree we want. And when I say the Lord, I don't mean Doctor Van Dieman, though we have his, too."

"That," said Jerome, "is probably what was meant for Adam and Eve if they'd obeyed the Law."

"You're to thank for that, Jerry All the same it seems odd that so much should depend on signing one's names to a paper before the U. S Consul. And afterwards, watching Tommy and his crowd lapping up champagne."

"Tommy did his job of giving you away like a gentleman and sportsman. Never thought the old stock market pirate had so much Lord Chesterfield about him."

Linda was listening but not to this eulogy of Tommy. Her head was askant and as Jerome stopped speaking he heard from somewhere back in the jungle the cry that had struck on their startled ears.

"They know we're back," Linda said, "but somehow the Racketeer's yell sounds differently."

"It is different," said Jerome "All the cussedness gone out of it Here like a welcome."

"It is a welcome. The poor old things have missed us. And they're pleased to have us back. Fancy Jerry, being welcomed on your honeymoon by a family of gorillas!"

"And liking it. All the same, I think we'd still better leave the Forbidden Fruit alone."

"Well, perhaps," she admitted. All I really wanted was to see what it was like."

"We've done that thing And you know what the Big Chief told us about his properties. According to the trine of natives where he found it

"Well find out about that, too, she laughed and started to splash up the bed of the brook. They came to the natural dam As they mounted it a voice that seemed now, like that of the Racketeer to have lost its unpleasant hostility cried jovially:

"Well, what in blazes do you want?"

"What do you think, Cocky?" Linda cried.

The End.

"Maintenance of the flavor of draught ale in bottles has been rare with the exception of a few foreign ales whose alcoholic content is unusually high. This is due to the necessity for heat treating bottled ales in order to preserve their contents.

"The high alcoholic content of our product, combined with a specially control'd process of brewing, fermenting and aging, enables us to place on the market bottled ale exactly as it emerges from the aging vats, with uniformity of flavor and body."

NUDE DRAWING STIRS ART BATTLE

Center of Row Over Nude Art

Miss Anna Neu Mark of Allston, whose drawing showing two nude recumbent figures, male and female, stirred all business, political and artistic Gloucester, when it was ordered removed from a Main street jeweller's window by Lawrence J. Hunt, secretary of the Gloucester Chamber of Commerce. Of course the entire art colony leaped to the defense of the drawing.

Straws which show the way the wind is blowing for the coming generation.

For the past three years, the United States Office of Education has been making a survey of the existing population of teachers. Recently it published its findings. Its recommendations are as follows:

First, action by every state to reduce the present production of teachers by one-fifth because of an increasing oversupply that cannot be absorbed by the schools. Second, no new teachers should be employed nor any former teachers re-employed who cannot meet the generally accepted standards of two years' training beyond high school for elementary teachers and four years of college work for teachers in the secondary schools. Third, every state should set a date when all teachers must have a minimum of four years' preparation beyond high school.

These standards would work no hardship, of course, in Massachusetts, except in limiting the number of candidates admitted to the teacher-training schools, but they do show a determination to do away with the low standards of teacher training generally existing in the United States. Such recommendations are not binding on the backward states, those not interested in efficiency or too poor to provide proper education. If they are to be interested, probably no arrangement will have to be made whereby North and East will pay the expenses of the educational systems of the West and South. It would be nothing new!

But here in Massachusetts recommendations going in the same direction have been made, which must certainly be carried out. The Supreme Court has made rulings, effective after October 1935, by which candidates for the study of law must possess a high school education and the equivalent of two years in college. No correspondence courses in the law will be allowed to count. Furthermore, candidates wishing to take bar examinations must complete three years of study in a full time law school requiring students to devote substantially all their working time, or a law school having a course of not less than four years, equivalent in the number of working hours in a three-year course in a full time law school. The ruling has been signed and printed in the Bar Bulletin of the Boston Bar Association.

I say that these recommendations will almost certainly be carried out, because within the past year or two the Supreme Court of Massachusetts has ruled that matters like these are not within the province of the General Court and are to be controlled solely by the courts themselves. Which means that politics will no longer enter into the matter and that the views of the Bar Association, the most interested and the most competent body on the subject, will have a fair chance of being put into effect.

There will, no doubt, be a considerable outcry, as there will at the notion that the entering classes of four normal schools and teachers' colleges must be cut down. Some few years ago a member of the Boston School Committee objected to the raising of the entrance requirements at Boston Teachers' College on the only just and effective basis of cutting down the over-supply of teachers—insisted that "every high school girl who wishes to become a teacher should be given the opportunity," and objected to the law of supply and demand or the question of superior competence for the good of the system.

In the same way, it has been argued that every young man or woman ought to be allowed to take the bar examinations without regard to the amount or quality of preparation in the law and entirely without regard to previous academic preparation. But one thing the depression has taught us is that the quality of general education is quite as important as the technical training. A teacher needs a thorough general education even more than she needs the teaching techniques of modern pedagogy. A lawyer needs a sound general education even more that he needs the technicalities of the law. Calvin Coolidge testified to that fact.

We have ugly names for people to try to practice professions without adequate education. We call such a doctor a quack. We call such a lawyer a shyster. We have, unfortunately, no such name for a poor teacher, because the teaching standards in the past have been so low that such teachers have been accepted as a matter of course.

We have simply come to recognize the fact that the professions must be reserved for people of the highest quality brains and character—and that only of 10 these two go together who have achieved the most solid and thorough general education this age can give them. Only then will our patients be safe from the quack and the shyster and the fake. And only then as a consequence will our civilization be safe. The protestations of associations who know never that their one limitation than anyone else have come to recognize these facts and to act to protect themselves and society.

And no statements of objections about democracy, the under-privileged, or "equal opportunity for all" can change these hard facts. The new motto is Equal opportunity for all who deserve opportunity!"

WIFE'S LONELY NIGHTS CAUSE MAN TO SUE

He had to work nights so he couldn't take his wife out. She used to go out herself, with two girl chums.

Finally, one day in April, he gave the little woman $15 to buy the groceries. For the groceries and when the grocery arrived home all right, his wife never did.

Such was the tale that Thomas A. MacDonald of Plymouth street, Swampscott, told Judge Edward R. O'Brien in Salem Probate Court, as he sought the custody of his [illegible] daughter, Mary.

The judge had the case under advisement today.

TIRED OF HOUSEWORK

MacDonald declared that he hadn't seen his wife since the fateful April day and that he had been told she said she was "fed up with housekeeping and tired of caring for the baby."

MacDonald's wasn't the only story of marital unhappiness Judge O'Brien had to listen over today. Theresa Anson, [illegible] and restoration of their maiden name had also put in the court.

Mrs. Helen D. Proud of Revere who delivered that Walter H. Cupp, of Winchester was either [illegible] or [illegible] by the 26-year-old wife wants her maiden name of Roseworth back.

Mrs. Anne A. Norwood of Gloucester testified that husband Carleton struck her in the face one night after she came home from "working overtime."

PULLED OFF PENDANT

He also pulled a pendant off her neck and tried to choke her, Mrs. Norwood asserted. She wants to resume the name Amero.

Trouble cropped up in the Johnson household in Southbridge over their children by prior marriages. Mrs. Minnie M. Johnson said she testified that William B. Johnson, of Methuen, deserted her six months ago. She would resume the name Moore, that of her first spouse, she told Judge O'Brien.

HIGGINS SEEKS CONGRESS SEAT

The fight for the congressional post in the 11th district waxed warmer today with the entry of Representative John P. Higgins of the West End who pledged himself to support the President and to securing "sound national unemployment insurance laws."

Rep. Higgins charged that Congressman Douglass who seeks re-election, has broken faith with the people in his district because he promised not to run again. He declared that the district is "tired of the inactivity of the incumbent."

Of James H. Brennan, former governor's councillor, who seeks Douglass' seat, Representative Higgins said:

"The people of the district are equally annoyed by the perennial candidacy of another individual. That same individual has sustained six, almost seven defeats, by the vote of the people for the various offices he sought during the past 12 years."

Curley Seeks Peace on Maynard Post

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

In the interest of party harmony after the Sept. 20 primary, former Mayor Curley's forces will do nothing to stir up a battle over who shall be chairman of the Democratic state committee when J. Joseph A. Maynard, present chairman, resigns on Sept. 1.

This attitude is predicated upon an agreement from the Walsh-Ely-Cole camp that the committee will [illegible] for the balance of the primary campaign under Dr. Helen I. Doherty, Democratic chairman.

Dr. Helen I. Doherty

The victor of the primary battle, under this proposed truce would then [illegible] for the chairmanship, the man or woman in whom he has the most confidence to assist him in the final battle against the G. O. P.

The attitude of the Curley wing was revealed today by Charles H. McGlue, Curley campaign manager and former state committee chairman, and the man whom Curley would select for the place in all probability, in the event of the temporary "hands-off" agreement is put into execution.

Dr. Doherty now [illegible] chairman, from 1922 to 1928, McGlue said today, city and state committees held aloof from inter-party fights during the primaries.

"But subsequent to my retirement, the two chairmen who followed me in office changed this rule. It was a dangerous change and the results were shown last week by the insistence of the national administration that those holding political office and high federal appointments give up one or the other.

"I always considered that the job of the state, city and town committees was to organize the state and insure party victory for the primary nominees.

"My name has been mentioned as one to succeed Mr. Maynard because of my experience in that position. However, I feel that a contest now for the chairmanship should not be countenanced.

"The procedure should be the same as has been adopted by the Democratic National Committee, that is the chairman of the state committee should not be chosen until a day subsequent to the primary, when the nominee for governor with a mandate of the voters could indicate to the committee the person in whom he has the most confidence for the position."

PONZI'S BAIL PLEA DENIED

Charles Ponzi, fighting deportation, must remain in the East Boston immigration station until the United States Circuit Court hears his appeal from the federal district court decision denying his petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

Judge Elisha H. Brewster in federal court today, following a lengthy bench hearing, denied a motion of Ponzi's counsel, Peter V. Maggio, to admit Ponzi to bail. United States Attorney Francis J. W. Ford opposed the motion.

Maggio gave notice of appeal from the denial of the writ of habeas, and Judge Brewster said it may be January before the Circuit court can hear the case. If the Circuit court upholds the District court, Ponzi will have had his last liberty in the United States, unless the case goes to the United States Supreme court.

CAPE ANN SHOW SPLIT BY RIVAL FACTIONS

Meanwhile City, Painters Push Their Exhibitions

Gloucester, Aug. 7—There is nothing like a first-class row to whet an artist's appetite. [illegible] can be chaste, [illegible] and promote business for an art week exhibition.

Such, in fact, was the interest and interest was concern [illegible] Ann Art Week was off to a [illegible] start and with somewhat of a bang.

A PWA mural came in for its share in the controversy, but the main cause of a storm that Mayor George H. Newell and the municipal council at odds was a drawing by a Boston girl.

ALLSTON GIRL ARTIST

Miss Anna Neumark of Cambridge, a native of Allston, and her subject depicted a nude man and woman [illegible] with the suggestion of the [illegible] of another woman in the background. None of the [illegible] was quite sure what was meant in the theme.

Miss Neumark's picture was ordered removed from the window of Blanchard's jewelry store in Main street. Alderman Weston L. Friend won a vote in the municipal council to that effect.

Then came the Art Week committee to the rescue. Said they:

"The drawing is chaste and beautiful. It is well handled, with delicacy and restraint. Many continental churches, especially in Spain, contain art subjects no less startling."

Nonetheless, the offending piece of art was removed from the Blanchard window.

MURAL ART ON VIEW

At the same time that he was leading the assault against Miss Newmark's nudes, Alderman Friend put over an order in the council throwing open to the public, from 2 to 9 p. m. daily, exhibition of a new PWA mural in the city hall.

Mayor Newell objected to this display, not that he had anything against the mural, but because it lacked a frame, because settees weren't ready, and because the public would scratch the city hall auditorium floor.

The mural, by Artist Charles Allan Winter, depicts the history of Gloucester.

Lucius Beebe reports a new brass rail down the center of a big New York hotel's stairway for "slide-minded drunks." Reminds me that there is a gay-minded lady who cannot resist bannisters wherever she goes. Once she purged a stately wedding of its decorum by stepping out of the bridal march to shoot-the-chutes. The statuesque Lydia Russell declared she could only resist bannisters sliding by super-effort.

Even Lloyd George is a bannister slider.

Bruno Lessing has become America's most widely traveled columnist. Just now he is on a swing through the Orient on way back to Italy, which has become a temporary base. Bruno Lessing is the literary pseudonym of Rudolph Block, whose epic magazine stories of the Ghetto are established classics of the quarter. For years he was also idea man for comic strip artists and much of the hoopla they execute today were his suggestions. He collects canes as a hobby, loves the sidewalk cafes and is one of the better raconteurs.

I heard the other day that Mark Twain, for a few days in latter years, gave serious consideration to an excursion into daily columning. He was to turn out 450 words a day on any subject. His wife spiked his guns. She pleaded that for one of his years it was too much of a grind. Another time Twain turned down $50 000 a year for a weekly magazine article.

I know but one columnist of worth who quit at his peak—quit because of the exactments of the daily twirl. This was the late Charles R. Barnes, who flourished in the Middle-West 20 years ago. At the same time he quit fiction just as the better magazines were clamoring for his stuff. Writing became suddenly anathema. So much so he gave his typewriter away and in his last years refused even to write letters.

They were talking at the Cafe Lafayette the other evening about locales for fiction. New York, London and Paris are stand-bys. New Orleans and San Francisco lead the second division and during the past few years Hollywood becomes a serious contender. Indeed, there have been three distinct fiction successes with Hollywood as a background. Oddly enough, the city with likely more intrigue, color and cosmopolitan personalities than any other has never been successfully exploited among better fiction sellers. That is, Washington, D. C. Hawaii is just beginning to be fictionized.

The mellow Lafayette cafe, incidentally, has been the occasional haunt of almost every litterateur of parts. Edith Wharton liked it best of New York restaurants. Edwin Arlington Robinson shut goes there on increasingly frequent nights he dines out. Daniel Graham Phimps gave quiet dinners there. Even such moderns as F. Scott Fitzgerald and Sinclair Lewis are now and then patrons. The marble topped tables in the coffee room still feature dominoes and [illegible] And brandy glasses are the widest flanged in town.

NEW DEAL BEAR CROWD ACTIVE IN WALL ST.

Two Administrations Bring Enmity of Finance World

By International News Service

New York, Aug. 7—In the last few months a "new deal bear crowd" has sprung up in Wall Street, just as a Hoover bear group came into being during the dark market days of the preceding administration.

It is an unusual situation that knows no historical parallel, where two successive national administrations of different political faith have won through their acute enmity of financial interests.

There is, though, a wide difference between the Hoover bears and the new deal market brunts.

In the days of Hoover, a large group, individually and collectively, used to swamp the market with short sales every time the President or one of his chief lieutenants made a speech. They carried on their operations openly and cleaned up millions of dollars.

The new deal bears include some of the most important speculators and gamblers, but they are not the chief part of the group. The chief bears are the long-established banking interests, the large individual and institutional investors, the conservative executive and business men.

In the past, these interests, along with the speculators, would step into a declining market and buy up certain support stocks, when they thought the time was right. Then these bears would proceed to ... their operations. This did ... for a profit but at the same time ... the speculative market here.

Now, because of the ... new deal measures, ... their capital nor put themselves in a position to have some governmental sympathetical agency "crack down" on them.

These groups also "bear" the market and sell short ... They sell securities in industrial corporations and public utilities and railroads, and they buy securities in mining and silver and commodity stocks, as well as commodities themselves. They sell American securities to buy European or Canadian stocks.

Some of the more daring sell short or unload at the psychological moment large holdings of "long" stock. Rumors then start to ... political opponents of the new deal. Whether this is true or not, these rumors have made a lot of money in recent weeks, and a curious fact is that the selling drive is ... at the President's return from a cruise holiday.

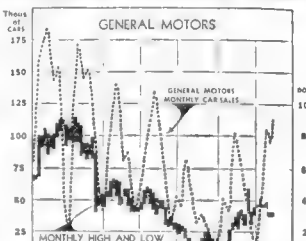
General Motors Sales



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE

This chart reveals the amazing recovery in sales which has been realized by General Motors, a gain which is fairly typical of the entire industry. General Motors reached its peak of sales in 1928 as contrasted to a peak for the industry as a whole attained in the following year. Thereafter for four successive years General Motors shows a decrease in sales, with the climax reached in the year 1932. There is a sharp recovery in 1933, and all signs indicate a further improvement for the current year.

In fact, the record for recent months is highly encouraging. Sales of General Motors cars for the month of June are the best since 1929 reaching a new high for the year of 115,811 units. This represents a gain of 18.5 per cent over May, which in itself is contrary to ... several years of car sales.

One feature of the General Motors distribution is the heavy sales to dealers outside the United States. Last month's total volume of such sales was 28,092, compared with 28,093 in May and 13,745 in June, 1933. Since the first of the year such sales have aggregated 153,409 units. This is more than General Motors has sold during any whole year since 1929.

It indicates an amazing revival of a special buying power abroad. To some extent this may be the result of increased prices for rubber and tin, two raw materials commodities which the United States consumes in large quantities. The enormous increase in the price of these commodities is the result of the depreciation of the dollar. This has made it possible for foreign producers of these commodities to secure a larger equivalent in terms of American goods. Apparently they have expressed this greater buying power, in part at least, in the products of General Motors.

'Business' Loans Are Up $70,000,000

HOARDED GOLD FLOWING INTO LONDON

Financial Basis for Recovery Is Greatly Strengthened

By Associated Press

New York, Aug. 7—The flow of hoarded gold from British India to London, which began with England's suspension of the gold standard not more ... years ago, has now exceeded the sum of $750,000,000.

This movement of metal from the hide-aways of the East is a major factor in the synthetic, but financial basis for economic recovery, in the opinion of many commentators. Much of the gold now goes into the vaults of central banks where it provides the foundation for credit and currency.

When England suspended the gold standard in September, 1931, the Indian rupee, the local currency, which is tied by statute to the British pound sterling, depreciated with the latter. The local price of gold in London, meanwhile, rose steadily in direct proportion to the decline in the exchange.

These shifting prices meant that hoarders of gold in India could obtain more rupees for their metal than ever before. Since the general level of commodity prices did not keep pace at all with the depreciation of currency, sellers were the gainers in terms of their command over the materials of living.

For ... generations, a goodly share of the world's gold production has gone to India, where Hindu potentates have fashioned it into trinkets or stored it away as a source of future power. Nobody knows how much gold is lost to active employment in this way, but estimates run into billions or dollars.

The movement of gold was a windfall for the British government. It had not been foreseen when depletion of the Bank of England's gold holdings and steady selling of the pound compelled Britain to go off the international currency standard. But the inflow has enabled the Bank of England to build its metal holdings to the highest level in history.

$294,288,000 in Frozen Deposits in Banks Released

By International News Service

Washington, Aug. 7 During the first seven months of 1934 $294,288,000 in "frozen" deposits were freed through the opening of national banks which had been closed during the past two years.

The Treasury announced today there were 342 banks opened during the seven-month period. In July reopenings numbered 29 national banks with deposits of $24,477,000.

In the previous six months reopening of national banks was as follows:

January, 59 banks with "frozen" deposits of $48,966,000; February, 83 and $62,953,00; March, 56 and $34,973,000; April, 36 and $31,893,000; May, 30 and $37,188,000, and June, 49 banks with deposits of $33,777,000.

The number of unlicensed national banks has been reduced to 66 through the close of business July 31.

"This figure represents nearly 4.7 per cent of the 1417 national banks, including ten non-member institutions in the District of Columbia, which are under the jurisdiction of the Comptroller of Currency, which were unlicensed on March 16, 1933, the day following the termination of the banking holiday," the Treasury said.

"More than 83 per cent of the national banks which still remained unlicensed at the end of July had received approved plans of reorganization from the comptroller's office.

"Unlicensed national banks on July 31 were divided as follows:

"Fifty-five with $35,867,000 "frozen" deposits had approved plans of reorganization and 11 institutions with $7,380,000 "frozen" deposits had disapproved plans for reorganization."

Of the 29 national banks licensed in July 26 were unlicensed national banks in the hands of conservators, involving "frozen" deposits of $23,360,000; two were insolvent national banks with deposits of $673,000, and one, with $430,000 deposits, was a state bank reorganizing under the national banking laws.

The comptroller's office announced the national banking situation has been entirely cleared in the first Federal Reserve district, consisting of the New England states, and that all banks closed immediately following the banking holiday had been reopened or liquidated.

This is the first Federal Reserve district to reach such a position.

TARIFF CHANGE GREAT AID TO BRITAIN

Cultivation of the Domestic Market Is Big Factor

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.)

New York, Aug. 7 The new principle which followed ... Britain from the ... hurt ... chronic ... ...

... Rukeyser

... country turned its back on free trade and began to lay greater emphasis on fostering home agriculture and ... cultivation of the domestic market, a new ... got under way.

The uneven distribution of recovery in Great Britain supports these conclusions. The exporting industries have continued to lag, while the chief improvement has been in the newer industries, especially those which cater mainly to the home consumer market.

The current statistics of unemployment show that unemployment is at least severe in London and the Southeastern district, relatively low in the midlands and in the southwest; bad in the north, and in Scotland, and worst of all in Wales. All districts, however, show an improvement over 1931, though the gains are greatest in the midlands and poorest in Wales.

New industries have been attracted to places where local tax rates were attractive, and the worked to the disadvantage of places with the older industries where there is maximum unemployment and hence the largest burden of relief.

Meantime, the world trade industries employ relatively fewer than a decade ago, and the home trades, including the distributive trades, various services, construction and public works, electrical trades, and printing and publishing, employ more.

Already thoughtful Britons are wondering whether they must permanently resign themselves to economic life on a Nationalist basis.

The Westminster Bank, in its current review says:

"While the fall in the proportions of production industries as a whole, and of the output of industries in particular, has been accentuated by the special vulnerability of these trades to general economic depression, it also reflects changing demands.

"The enlarged proportion of total expenditure given to 'services' which accompanies a rising standard of living is well known to the economist, and despite setbacks, the standard of living does move gradually upward. New inventions create new demands and new employment, which must reduce the percentage of the total held by the older industries, even if no diversion of demand is caused.

Great Britain of course is less accepted to self contained than the United States, with its diversity of climate and natural resources. Great Britain has been pre-eminently a trading nation, yet it is significant that the tariff ... brought at least a measure of recovery to the depressed ...

Montgomery Ward Sales Increase

Chicago, Aug. 7 Montgomery Chicago, Aug. 7 Montgomery probably show a somewhat smaller percentage increase over a year ago than the 10.6 per cent gain in this comparison reported for June.

The drought continued to hold down sales in the Northwest and the near Southwest, while labor troubles in the Pacific coast territories is understood to have shown a

STOCK PRICES ARE MIXED IN DULLNESS

New York, Aug. 7 The stock market today was dull and irregular, with a number of issues showing fractional declines. Lack of speculative interest was attributed to the approach of the week-end, which ordinarily is a dull period, and the uncertainty as to what action the Supreme Court would take on the Kentucky bond decision by Justice Black was reversed.

While foreign exchanges were generally steady, the French franc was weaker. Domestic bonds were irregular. Commodities were mixed.

Renewed weakness in the rails and U. S. Steel was the principal factor in the day's dullness. Pacific issues were under pressure for a time, but rallied on reports that the Southern Pacific Co. would not be forced into receivership. Trading was light throughout the session, and during the last hour the market was virtually at a standstill.

Sales to 11 a. m. approximated 700,000 shares.

Electric Bond & Share Income Is $10,159,644

New York, Aug. 7—Report of Electric Bond & Share Co. for 12 months ended June 30, 1934, shows net income of $10,159,644 after expenses and taxes, equivalent after preferred dividends, to 32 cents a share on 5,267,147 shares of common stock, including scrip. This compares with $10,982,382, or 48 cents a common share in 12 months ended June 30, 1933.

For quarter ended June 30, 1934, net income was $2,191,940 after expenses and taxes, equal after preferred dividends, to one cent a common share, against $2,539,321, or 8 cents a share in June quarter of 1933.

Net excess of book value over sales price of investment securities sold during the 12 months ended June 30, last, amounting to $079,473 was charged to capital surplus account, against a similar charge of $3,830,588 in 12 months ended June 30, 1933.

For quarter ended June 30, 1934, net excess of book value over sales price of investment securities sold, was $2330, against $079,063 in second quarter of 1933.

Dividends received by the company in the form of capital stock are taken on its books either at par value or if of no-par value, then at the stated value as shown in balance sheets of the respective issuing companies, or at market value if less than par value or stated value, as the case may be.

Brokers Association Is To Expand Activities

New York, Aug. 7 Expansion of activities of the Association of Stock Exchange Firms, composed of members of the four leading exchanges of stocks, Stock Exchange Firms on Government Committee Room of the New York Stock Exchange. Howard S. Bowen, president of the association, presided at a New York luncheon at which members and guests were present.

Two resolutions were adopted, one recommending to governors of the exchanges a general conference committee to look into development of regular conferences on problems confronting brokers. The second called for appointment of a public relations committee to see that the position of the brokers on various questions is made plain.

The sense of the meeting was that all partners now welcomed the Securities and Exchange Commission and desired to co-operate with it, and Floyd Y. Keeler of Orvis Bros & Co., spokesman for the meeting. It is the desire of the members to do everything possible to hasten issuance of rules by the commission, with idea that clarification of this situation might improve business, Mr. Keeler said.

While it is anticipated that further general meetings of partners will be held, possibly as frequently as once a month at discretion of the Association, it is likely that either under the auspices of existing committees of the association or through new committees various problems will be discussed and results of these discussions will be submitted to general meetings and then to the governors of the Association.

Board of governors of the Association will meet soon, and committee personnel recommended to it may be appointed then.

MARKET VIEWS OF BROKERS

Livingston & Co.—Just when something will break, to affect prices one way or the other, and what the character of the development is likely to be is anyones guess. Counting on only a very moderate improvement in fall business, however, many stocks are at attractive prices.

Josephthal & Co.—The General Motors dividend is likely to result in an extension of yesterday afternoon's rally but in view of the poor outlook for many companies considerable irregularity can be expected. Barring some unexpected developments the indications are that offerings again will appear around last Thursday's and Friday's highs.

Hornblower & Weeks—As to the immediate prospects for the market, we are inclined to feel that it is again oversold and in a technical condition to rally, and that it is not unlikely that the recent lows will hold.

Longwood's Week Of Tennis Delight; Flaw in Perfection

Spellman's Two-Fold Character; Puppies and Golf; The Phutile Phils

By AUSTEN LAKE

I MUST CONFESS THAT after all these years I have never become inspired by the spirit of tournament tennis. It seems to be a nice game, as it is played these lazy summer afternoons at Longwood's green velvet courts, with bronzed youngsters in white scanties and lengths of frogs-leg flesh showing.

Austen Lake

There is a delicacy and skill, too, despite the sissy implication of "love" games and sets and the eternal attitude of apology on the part of an athlete who hits a net cord ball and says, "O, so sorry."

There is a monotony about the perfect flow of strokes when players like Wilmer Allison, Berkley Bell and Bitsy Grant, hit the ball with their gut-paddles, and I suppose in all branches of sport there is nothing so boresome as perfection. I recall that Mr. Connie Mack, the baseball maestro at Philadelphia, could not entice his customers out to the park several years because they did not wish to be vexed by the Athletics' flawless play. So they quit going and Connie had to sell his experts and collect an assortment of bums.

THE PATRONS, OF WHICH THERE were few today at Longwood, presented a gay dazzle of garden colors, while the officials on stilt chairs announced in graveyard voices the progress of the match. But then the pay load of folk, who are expected to shower down enough cash to pay the expenses of the six or eight gifted youths who do nothing but trek around the land, playing tennis and living lives of oriental luxury at no cost, is not expected until Saturday's finals.

Today the ladies, whose art can sometimes be forgotten by the spectators and be merely gazed upon for the sake of their pink and white loveliness, are getting into the third round. There is little Miss Sarah Palfrey, who, at a small distance, has the appearance of a child who has just left her nursery toys and means to gallop right back as soon as she gets through, who will probably win the silver flask.

But I fear that tennis is more of a sport than a spectacle because I miss the boisterous moan of the crowd and its emotional uproar. Maybe I'm just not polite enough, but it always seems that the setting is theatrical, with a reverse side that might show burlap backing and scaffold props. And the patrons in summery hues, who seem always at the point of bursting into song and betraying themselves as the twelve Gamby-Hale sisters supported by the dozen harmonious commuters.

AMONG PAUL BOWSER'S living museum of quaint characters who rent out their bodies for wrestling exhibitions at a price, I think that Johnny Spellman deserves honorable mention. Because Johnny, who is doing a job of work against an unknown named George Kohler tomorrow night at the Arena, is the Dr. Jeyell and Mr. Hyde of the wrestling business.

You would never suspect, on seeing Johnny inside the plush ropes, displaying a fearsome array of tusks and stamping around like a primeval buffalo, that he was a cum laude scholar at Brown some years ago and a No. 1 athlete. You would think that he spends his spare time in a private zoo, tearing raw meat with his finger nails and reaching through the bars for peanuts.

But the fact is that Johnny is a serene, thoughtful citizen, given to literary tastes, evenings at home and gentle communion with his small son. Of all the wrestlers who trade on an illusion of savagery, elbow sledgings and monkey faces, Johnny's jungle fury masks a docile nature and quiet dignity.

IT IS SOMETHING OF A sight to see Spellman, who between times is Bowser's No. 2 press agent, sitting at his typewriter, boxing out a sweet yarn for the public press. And he plays the instrument with the piano forte method, using all fingers and employing the best college English.

It was Spellman who taught Gus Sonnenberg his first wrestling principles when Gus turned from automobile selling on the impulse of the moment. And in three gymnasium lessons Johnny gave Gus a worsting knowledge of three holds, which Gus promptly forgot when he entered the ring against a pudgy Turk. As Gus prowled around the scaffold, wondering what to do with his armful of arms and legs, he suddenly launched out in a headlong butt, striking his opponent in his moon-like abdomen. It was not wrestling, but it was good football, and thus, as Johnny says, something beautiful was born to the business, the flying tackle.

THE EPISODE OF THE little dog who snatched a golf ball and ran off during the Canadian Open championship last week, recalls the story of what happened years ago at Myopia during the National Open.

Alex Smith was playing in the final, and had driven over a rise at the fifteenth hole. A young lady, sister of one of the Myopia members, was standing beyond the rise with her little dog when the ball, badly sliced, trickled to her feet. The puppy, regarding the rolling ball as an invitation to play, snatched it up and looked ruefully at his mistress. She, horrified, chased the pup for fifty yards up the course before he dropped it. And thus, to Smith's amazement when he came to comb the tall grass for his ball, he found it, instead, well up the middle of the fairway, in a delicious lie.

Alex banged out a total of 331, tieing with Anderson for the title, and losing in the playoff. It was not until a year later that the young woman, conscience-laden, confided her dreadful secret to her brother.

THE PHANTASTIC PHILLIES, who come to Braves Field today, for a short seance, are the poorest fielding team in the National League on point of club standings. Yet their 107 double plays top that department of League play by a wide margin.

John McGraw used to say, "Give me a good double play combination and my fielding will take care of itself." This is on the basis that four-fifths of the infield chances are handled at short stop and second base.

The Phils are one of the queer anomalies of the National League race, .001 behind the Cubs for the batting leadership of the League, last in club fielding, and today, seventh in the League standings. The answer is that fielding, plus pitching, is still 75 per cent of the game's winning secret, the estimate that Walter Johnson made years ago.

YACHT RECORD DUE AT 'HEAD TODAY

Marblehead, Aug 7—A new Race Week record for total number of yachts competing was expected today as the Eastern Yacht Club's third and final day of competition opened this morning.

An even 300 yachts reported to set a record for the racing of yesterday, and with additional craft due this morning, the mark was certain to be boosted again.

The events of yesterday provided some excellent racing, though the wind was not as strong as on Sunday.

The nine classes which started off Marblehead rock were given triangular courses. Several gave tried port tack starts, among them being C. Raymond Hunt in Hornet in the Q class. He kept his lead all the way.

Allison and McDiarmid Match Best at Bowl

By Walter Kiley

Preliminary skirmishes safely over and the decks cleared for a torrid battle, Longwood's annual Bowl tennis tourney, its greatest in almost a decade of years, today proceeded to the third rounds for both men and women with only one slight mishap in the opening stages to mar an otherwise perfect record for seeded stars.

Allison, "Bitsy" Grant, Parker Van Ryn, Tidball, Prusoff and Budge survived the first two rounds without even flirting too seriously with danger.

Berkeley Bell, seeded No. 4, also seemed virtually certain to advance to the third round, the former Texan and present New Yorker being expected to coast through John Nicholl of Longwood, his second round opponent, [illegible]ing.

The nine classes which started off Marblehead rock were given triangular courses. Several gave tried port tack starts, among them being C. Raymond Hunt in Hornet in the Q class. He kept his lead all the way.

MISS RICE UPSET

Virginia Rice of Boston [illegible] the only casualty in either division. Seeded No. 4 among the women players, Miss Rice, who only received going [illegible] from Wardell, drew a bye in the first round and then fell victim to the sharpshooting [illegible] Marion Beard of Los Angeles in a hard fought, three packed two-set second round match, 6-4, 11-9.

From here into Saturday's final, the unusually large galleries at Longwood, can look for and confidently expect nothing but championship play.

For instance Wilmer Allison of Austin, Texas, seeded No. 1, meets John McDiarmid of Fort Worth, Texas a youth who defeated the indefatigable Bitsy Grant in the 1933 national clay court championship and yesterday eliminated Donald Morrison of Virginia, finalist in the recent Agawam tourney.

INJURED ARM MAY BENCH WERBER, SOX SPARKPLUG

It's Happy Birthday to Bill McKechnie -:- He Celebrates His 47th Milestone

STAR'S ELBOW HIT BY BALL AT READING

Philadelphia, Aug. 7—A gloomy Boston Red Sox caravan was here this morning to open a series with the Athletics in a single game this afternoon.

Fear that Billy Werber, great third baseman of the Boston club might be out of the lineup for the balance of the week was expressed by members of the team.

Werber was struck on the elbow by a pitched ball in batting practice before an exhibition game at Reading, Pa., last evening. The infielding sparkplug of the Hose attempted to remain in the lineup for the contest, which his team won, 8 to 3.

Intense pain from the blow, however, caused Werber to stay out of the exhibition. A thorough examination of the ailing member was planned for the morning.

It was thought that no bones were injured by the accident, and that baking and massaging might enable Werber to hold his usual place in the lineup within a short time.

The exhibition game in Reading was marked by a home run accurate record length at the park, hit by Art Graham, Sox protege and former Somerville, Mass., high school ace.

RAP WORKED WONDERS

Most people would have come up at least [illegible]

Bill McKechnie, manager of the Tribe, looks back as he celebrates his 47th natal day. Above, the leader of the Braves is shown as he looked almost two decades back when he played with the Giants. He was an infielder and rated a good 'un. In the center upper panel he is snapped in one of his outstanding baseball triumphs, when he engaged Bucky Harris and his Washington crew in the 1925 World Series. McKechnie was manager of the Pirates that season. To the right, is Bill in the uniform of the Cincinnati Reds where he made a stopover as an infielder. But that was in the long ago. Today we find him a bit grayed but still retaining the leadership and ability of his youth. He is enjoying a birthday breakfast with Mrs. McKechnie.

Father-Son Classic on at Winchester

By Bill Grimes

For real thrills in golf competition there is no event on the M. G. A. list to compare with the two-day annual Winchester Country Club Father and Son tournament, which started this morning.

Jim Beede, than whom there is no more dutiful father, has reserved four starting times in order to carry out his assignment of playing with four sons. A year ago, Jim played four rounds in two days [illegible] worst luck of the annihilated.

Of the 23 Greater Boston golfers who will play in the New Bedford four ball invitation, 11 are from the Belmont Spring Country Club. Jack McCarthy, Lewis Grimball, Ken Morse, Tom McGinn, Chuck Weathers and Gerry Reed are playing return engagements at New Bedford but this will be the first appearance of Dan McCormack, Ralph Jones, Bill Kemble, Herman Nash and Newman "Cookie" Cook.

Dave Whiteside and Dr. Joshua H. Weeks are primed to defend their New Bedford title but they are confronted with a real task for the field is the fastest that ever graced a Whaling City four-ball invitation.

Bill Cunningham and Lou Little are putting on their act at the Portland, Me. Country Club today and the show should give the natives something to talk about all winter.

Frank E. Craven, Charles River [illegible]

Lard Lewis M. Grimball, Belmont Springs will be one of the strongest combinations in the New Bedford four-ball invitation. Just how far they will go is another matter and depends upon the handicapping system.

With Guy Munger and his son Jack playing today, it is very likely that the low gross winners of the annual Winchester Father and Son tournament will be decided this afternoon. The Mungers are playing with Joe Galvin, Sr., and Franny Galvin.

It will be years before Bill McDonough gets out of his mind the thoughts of playing the fifth hole during the Norfolk open. He started by hooking out of bounds topped his next into the rough, and from there put his third in the brook, costing him a penalty stroke. His fifth was on the fairway but he turned on his sixth and was out of bounds again.

His seventh shot left him stymied by the tool house, whence he played out safe and then topped his ninth. Finally, he caught hold of one but was a little strong and went over the green from where he pitched back on and was down in two putts for 8—you count 'em. Bill's too weak—Thirteen is the answer.

M'COY TO MEET AL GAINOR

Al Gainor, heavy hitting middleweight from New Haven, has been matched to meet Al McCoy of Waterville, Me., in a ten-round bout at a Goodwin A. C. show at Braves Field on August 16.

Gainor recently won from Lou Rouillard at New Haven. Al is a rugged, two fisted warrior, and also a first class boxer.

McCoy has punched his way out front in the local heavyweight situation, and is confident he will lick Gainor.

The crowd gave Werber recognition [illegible]

Werber's batting picked up. He didn't have the mental hazard which goes with making errors in the field. He got on base more frequently and [illegible] to Ty Cobb as he made opposing catchers look foolish.

Werber has found himself in his new position. His combined ability as a fielder, batter and base runner makes him one of the most valuable ball players in the American League.

Greatness of Cobb

I CONSIDER Cobb the greatest [illegible]

Later Cobb became a bit more careful in crushing into bases. He'd shoot for the base behind [illegible] not a collision between his spikes and the spikes of a rival infielder.

Cobb took chances which is why he was a wonder ball player. Werber is doing the same today.

There is a tendency on the part of professional athletes to play [illegible]

"I was once on a minor league club that sent seven young stars up in one season," he relates. "It is unusual for a whole league to produce three players in a season who stick in fast company. Too much time is being wasted on 'has-beens' in the bushes."

[illegible] were to set out to improve the game he'd first [illegible] to eliminate the [illegible] ball.

"The present agate is the worst blight that's fallen on the game in my experience," he opines. "A hurler can no longer rely on his supporting cast. If a batter meets a pitch squarely, it will fly out of the largest park. The tosser must bear down every second. Consequently he needs a lot of rest between starts.

"I don't agree, either, that the fans like the ball. We had a short ball last season and the customers never exhibited more interest in a race. Now you see them leaving in the sixth and seventh innings of one-sided slugging bees."

Another of Bill's moves would be to curb the authority of 'umps.'

"They say the old-time player had more fight. He did because he was allowed to. Look cross-eyed at an umpire today and you'll be chased. Drunk with power, the arbiters become more inefficient every year and the game becomes more and more a pink tea party."

Bill went on to make a few personal nominations.

Greatest player—Honus Wagner. Smartest player — Honus Wagner. Smartest manager—John McGraw. Most colorful player Rabbit Maranville.

There were plenty of hard-boiled players in the old days but Bill [illegible] hesitate to put the [illegible] season as the toughest [illegible]

He is now serving his fifth year [illegible] contract has four more years to run. When he has completed this term, he will have served no less than any other pilot in Boston baseball history.

Bill broke in as an infielder with the Pirates in 1904. [illegible]

"Cubs were still without training clubhouses when I broke [illegible] debut," he reminisces. "We dressed at the hotels. Showers were unheard of and we were fortunate if there were one bath-room to a floor at the third-rate hostelries where we stayed.

"We went to the parks in hacks or a fatly-ho. If we beat the home club it was too bad. We'd be stoned all the way back to town."

The competition in those days was much tougher, [illegible] reveals, both because the clubs carried fewer players and there were far more classy candidates trying to catch on than at present.

FINDS MODERN GAME O. K.

Bill has no serious fault to find with the modern game. Just the same, he thinks the sport is now being run backwards in many respects.

WAYLAYER IN 6TH WILSON'S TOP CHOICE AT 'GANSETT PARK

order to grace the winner's circle here today.

Waylayer has been assigned the feather impost of 105 pounds, and the distance of one mile and a furlong is right down his alley. Maurice Peters, who has been riding in excellent form at this session, will have the mount.

ALARIC, UNLAWFUL, MISS ROSS

ALARIC failed to finish in the money in his debut over this course, but he turned in a clever performance, considering that he was in no end of trouble. After being off a bit slowly, he was rushed to the leaders, but finished in tight quarters, to be beaten less than two lengths by the winner, Fake. UNLAWFUL was second to Fake in the that race, but he had clear sailing throughout. Moreover, he is picking up eight pounds off that race. MISS ROSS earned brackets during the recent Arlington Park meeting and is entitled to some consideration.

MACADAM, MARGE, HASTY BELLE

MACADAM, a hard luck horse during the recent Rockingham Park meeting, must be given a real call over this field of non-winners. Since June 21 the daughter of Macaw faced the barrier five times at Salem, twice placing and once finishing third. In one of her races she was only a half length in back of Polyfon at the finish. MARGE was away poorly in debut over this course and had scant chance thereafter. Her best effort would be all dangerous. HASTY BELLE finished close up to Flying Don in her last at Rockingham and looms next best.

AYSTON, FRED ALMY, INSTIGATOR

AYSTON has only to run back to any one of his recent Salem races in order to lead this field home. Looks strictly like a two-horse affair his liking the track. FRED ALMY might have trimmed AYSTON in his last start, but for stumbling at the head of the stretch. At the time of the mishap he was safely Playing On. INSTIGATOR has worked three-quarters over the track in 1:14 2-5 and is razor sharp.

SMOOTH CROSSING, DARK TYRANT, LUCKY PRINCE

SMOOTH CROSSING, an A. G. Vanderbilt horse, looks good as anything else in this affair, which is for horses that have never won a race. The Vanderbilt colors finished fourth last week in Saratoga in a $2,500 top and bottom claiming race. In his only other trip to the barrier at Belmont Park, he finished fifth behind Longfield. DARK TYRANT is informed. Back of him in that effort was Scotch Soldier. Orsl. God o' War, Laurel Miss and others that have graced the winner's circle. DARK TYRANT was installed the favorite over Happy Surprise, Knight of Old and other fair maidens last out, but was powdered soon after the start. With clear sailing he may prove troublesome. LUCKY PRINCE has been working well over this course.

LOFTY LADY, XANDRA, AYMOND

LOFTY LADY was shuffled back soon after the start of her debut over this course. She was "off" however, she closed a world of ground to finish fourth behind Scotch Soldier. Off that race, she should stand a world of beating in an affair of this kind. XANDRA stopped badly after forcing a fast pace in that race. He is dropping eight pounds off that mark and should hold on long enough to save the place. AYMOND was second to Scotch Soldier and is entitled to a money position.

WAYLAYER, ADOBE POST, HONEYSWEET

WAYLAYER will have ADOBE POST to down. The latter was a consistent winner over at the other town and is razor sharp. HONEYSWEET, a surprise winner on opening day, looks next best.

HOBNAIL, MAYVITE CALOME

HOBNAIL, one that has been sharpened up in sprint races, should break on top and make every spot of this journey a winning one. His past record indicates that this distance is well within his powers. MAYVITE displayed considerable improvement in his last and is a place to Grand Acre and looks next best. CALOME won several races over at Rockingham and may prove troublesome.

Redcoat's Trumpeting Scatters Army of Fuzzy Joe After Race Coup Fails

By Dave Egan

Narragansett Park, R. I., Aug. 7 — There was some confusion around and about the track yesterday.

Fuzzy Joe and his cahoots arrived in style—that is to say, Izzy the Gonniff, James McEnaity, G. Wellington McLean, Theodore the Goat, and the rest of the party.

Fuzzy Joe was in charge. He had snapped a new hat out of some flea bag in which he had spent the night, and had discovered a fairly long cigar, which he reserved until the track was almost reached.

With his thumb in a spiint, from reaching for a cigar the other day, the fuzzy fellow chartered a taxicab, and it was quite a sight to see him and his friends from the poorhouse outracing the cab driver after they had reached here.

ARMY FOOLS WEALTHY

They sprinted right through the turnstiles, and immediately started putting on a 10 cent bite here, and a five cent bit there, until they had pooled the equivalent of the lowest pari-mutuel sum—namely, two bucks.

A horse named Tarbucket was in the race, and the boys from the poorhouse immediately went into the bucket, for Tarbucket ran into the bucket. He rolle' around the track like a weary Army.

Fuzzy and his friends, one by one, slowly but surely began to bend at the knees, and a nonchalant glance as they sank into a stupor in the lawn. Nobody had ever paid any attention to Izzy the Gonniff previously to yesterday, but he looked like Tarbucket this morning when he arose, and the boys played it as a sure hunch.

IZZY TAKES RAP

Moreover, Izzy usually swings the mop at the poorhouse, but this morning, they handed him the bucket. That made it a reliable hunch. When the horse ran for Patrick T. Sweeny, the boys hit Izzy over the head with the bucket.

Then they slept, in a dignified body, on the lawn, arear the club house and shall the hot dog stand. There is a bugler who trumpets noises in order to tell the jockeys to come to attention, and the bugler, attired in a scarlet coat annoyed them no end.

"He's a red coat," said Fuzzy Joe.

"The British are coming," said G. Wellington McLean.

And they skipped the fence and made as crickets.

FUZZY'S MOTIVES NOBLE

"This was not an international bet," said Fuzzy Joe at the poor house later. "It is true that several gentlemen of foreign extraction donated certain nickels and dimes which will be accounted for at a later date, but it was only to improve the breed of the horse."

"I and my associates are not interested in making money," He continued.

"We are true sportsmen, who follow horses because we love thoroughbreds. As a matter of fact, my father followed horses on Broadway (this was years ago)—with a long push and broom, and I have never lost my love for them."

"It was the bag about Izzy the Gonniff," Fuzzy Joe continued. "There were credible parties dressed like messenger boys, or perhaps police officers, who followed him. Some said a Police road spikes were thrown at them, and Izzy the Gonniff was left at the post. At last reports, he was running a close second to the local freight."

GUARDSMAN IS BEST IN SALEM HIGHLIGHT

By Ed Cogswell

Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H., Aug. 7—An entertaining card of 10 races is scheduled for today, the sixth of the Grand Circuit meeting. The feature event (9th) is a third race for two-year-old trotters for a purse of $1060.

On paper it looks like a tough race to figure out. Guardsman, in the Brusie stable, is very likely to carry the most money, but the margin will be so small over the play on China and Prince John, that if he wins the tickets should be sizable.

This is not to mention Lucre, who won her race last week the speedy Athlones Sally Boy. M'Liss, which Harry Stokes is banking on, and a couple of others that might be thrown in for good measure.

VOLUNTEER READY

The state of Maine trainer and driver, Harry Cluckey, appears to have the better chance for carrying off the first race with Volunteer. His opposition will come from Perry Hanover, with Tommy Berry up, and Yankee, driver Cameron doing the honors.

Miss Marcella Burial to Guy Barlett in the second race to best among others Jimmy Direct, Hugh M. Napoleon and Forest Guy. This event ought to bring out a hair-raising finish, so closely matched are the contestants.

The friends of James F. Young of Quincy will be out in force to play Calumet Cincinnati in the sixth race. This mare has performed so creditably in the past history of laying down their checks in the seventh race, for the wrestling promotor's buccaneer stable pirates. There will be fair odds against her, for she stacks against Allie Watts McKinney, Tom Fox and Miss McGregor.

Already the boys are talking about the 2:10 pace, set for tomorrow. There is quite a friendly rivalry between the drivers for the General Motors executive of Chicago, and W. N. Reynolds, the North Carolina tobacco magnate, pertaining to the respective merits of their pacers, Raider and Dick Reynolds. Each is down to win during the 2:10 pace Wednesday. Raider will have Marvin Childs in the sulky, while Dick Reynolds will have Harry Stokes up.

But the above two are not to have the race between themselves. There will be stiff competition from Lee Storm, Jr., and others driving. His majesty with Sep Palin doing the honors, Calumet Dubonque, with Al Heyer up, wearing the colors, and Harry McKay behind Lee Storm. This list of pacing stars are the pick of the entire country.

Dr. John Marston of Manchester is in attendance daily in the paddock. He is the state veterinarian of New Hampshire, and is on hand in the event of the trainer's try to slip on a fast one in using dope, the doctor takes several tests from the horses during the afternoon.

Fred H. Bellows, of the Old Colony and the Metropolitan Driving Clubs, sprung a surprise on the spectators when his filly, Calumet Emma, got the place money to Forbes Direct.

Townsend Horses Banned at 'Gansett

Narragansett Park, Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 7—The stewards took action here today, which resulted in the banning of horses owned by E. B. Townsend, according to an official announcement.

Following the notice from stewards at Rockingham that a saliva test indicated that Secular was found to have been given stimulants, the stewards barred Secular, Unlawful and Fly Brook from racing o r the local track for the remainder of the year.

"Cinderellas" Arrive Here for Test

By N. F. T.

Today is the day when those 14 microphone "Cinderellas" from Eastern cities are to stack up against our Boston "Hollywood Hotel" program audition winner, Alice O'Leary. Twice tonight the air audience here's about can catch an ear or two full of what each contestant has to offer in the way of vocal and dramatic talent. At 6:30 there's a studio party with Alice playing hostess and entertaining her rivals.

Incidentally by that time the winner will be known. Again at 10 o'clock, the group will broadcast with Ranny Weeks and his orchestra from Cocoanut Grove, also through WNAC channels.

Arriving last night and this morning, the following young ladies are seeing the sights of the town. Rita Howard of Bangor, Dorothy Maiher of Hartford, Agnes MacDonald of Providence, Virginia Kidder of Manchester, Virginia Thompson of Bridgeport, Gertrude Barre of Worcester, Betty Gottschalk of Buffalo, Lois Hardcke of Erie, Ducie Weir of Syracuse, Paula Sloane of Albany, Esther Hansen of Springfield, Christine Frazier of Rochester and Marjorie Raimoux of Utica. They'll be voted on by our Alice O'Leary, during the Zone No. 2 finals consuming the hour between 1 and 3 o'clock this afternoon.

ADDED AUDITIONS

There are also some special First National auditions (WBZ) holding forth at the WBZ sound sanctums this afternoon, which indicates that the Hub "mike" Moguls are earnestly bent upon unearthing some new and striking features with which to embellish local air lanes.

It's the "Red Mill" operetta by Victor Herbert that comes in for vocal to court other fortunes, for Gladys Swarthout and John Barclay tonight (WEEI) at 10 o'clock.

The regular weekly broadcast of the Boston American Secret Agent X-9 Club on WAAB at 6:30 tonight will bring a treat for listeners, for the Chief will present as guest stars the four Foley "G" Nephews, Walter, Marion, Donald and Dorothy. These youthful artists have appeared on many stage and radio programs and are rated as real stars in singing and dancing. They will be accompanied on the piano by their mother, Mrs. Christine Foley.

ALLEN ANTICS

Just previous to the above attraction, Fred Allen and his "Hour of Smiles" funmaking at around newspapers tomorrow night (WEEI) at 9 P. M. Verily, "ye Editor Allen" intends to take the grizzled old American Fourth Estate realm for a sizzling "ride" but off to one side he likes to sit in, fun. Thus what can the scribes do but "take it" good naturedly, as he puts it out of course.

ERA Worker Dead of Job Injuries

Holyoke, Aug. 1.—Charles Vilson, of North street, South Hadley Falls, ERA worker, is dead today, from injuries received when a sewer in which he was working caved in.

Two other workers, James Dezby and Bernard Duffy, of Canal street, South Hadley Falls, were rescued by fellow employes.

FLAME SOARS 40 FEET AT PUMP

Flaming gasoline shot 40 feet into the air today when the car of a passing fish man stopped off at a double pump in a station at Shawmut avenue and Roxbury street, Roxbury.

Witness Malone of Center street, Jamaica Plain, who, police said, was driving the car, narrowly escaped death when the flames gored his car.

Malone, police said, reported that he starting wheel jammed and caused him to lose control of the vehicle.

Residents of the district and employes of nearby garages lured for the flames for a few minutes, but the flames quickly died out.

You Hear Them on the Air

Carson Robison and Bud Billings . . . The state-line boys . . . One born in Kansas . . . Just across in Missouri line . . . And the other being born in Missouri . . . Just across the Kansas line . . . But Carson is the woolier-dyed, genuine hill-billy . . . having been born in the Missouri Ozarks.

Both Carson and Bud were brought up on the ballads they sing in the air . . . And Robison has written others . . . For future kids to be brought up on . . . Including "Billy Richardson's Last Ride" . . . written around an actual incident . . . And others . . . Also written around actual incidents.

Carson's Dad was an old-time fiddler . . . Who drove on cattle trails . . . From Indiana to Southeast Kansas . . . Accompanied by three brothers . . . Also fiddlers . . . And how the plains must have sounded . . . With those fiddle scrapings.

Five years ago, Carson arrived in New York . . . With only a twang and a few songs in Hillbilly vaudeville as experience . . . But he had with him a vast reservoir of mountain and hill-billy ballads . . . And he turned them into songs . . . And then into records . . . And then he met Bud.

Bud is the meantime had completed a year of four colleges . . . None of which he liked . . . And Bud was selling the same brand of entertainment as Carson . . .

So what could be more natural than that the two should team up? . . . Which they did . . . Becoming the "Hillbilly Boys" in honor of Carson Robison and Bud Billings.

Robison accompanies himself on the guitar . . . While singing ballads . . . And he has a frame which fits around his neck . . . To hold a harmonica in front of his mouth . . . On which . . . The harmonica . . . He plays the choruses . . . And while . . . He five years ago . . . He had to have the wire frame especially . . . Now there is a great demand for them . . . Three different factories are making them . . . Because America . . . So it would seem . . . May yet go hillbilly.

Tomorrow's Radio Personality Portrait will be that of Frank Parker, who likes steaks but not beautiful women.

MORGENTHAU IN RUM TAX WAR

By Universal Service

Washington, Aug. 7—With a sweeping reorganization of the nation's alcohol tax collection forces, dividing the country into 15 enforcement districts, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau today leaped into a finish fight against bootlegging.

Morgenthau went so far as to intimate that he would retire from the treasury post he now holds, if he could not win out.

Refusing to espouse at present any suggestions for reducing liquor taxes, which have been a disappointing yield of revenue, he declared:

"Some people have been kind enough to say that this is the first honest attempt at enforcement of the liquor laws. We have not really got started."

GOODWIN LINKS ELY IN TIEUP

Taunton, Aug. 7—Democrats here were awaiting an answer from Governor Ely on the charges of Frank A. Goodwin, Republican "dummy patriot" and candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, that the Ely and Bacon interests are "tied up."

Goodwin, speaking at the Republican club here, said that the governor had purposely put in a weak slate of Democrats to assure the election of Lieutenant Governor Joseph E. Warner, the former motor vehicles registrar, and "State street for its hungry interest in state elections."

You can see Barbara Holmes daily from 9 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. at the new free rental bureau on the fourth floor of the R. H. White Co.

BROOKLYN PAIR HEADS BRIDGE

By Associated Press

Asbury Park, N. J., Aug. 7—Two residents of Brooklyn, N. Y., were ahead today, after the first round of the National Men's Pairs championship event of the American Bridge League's summer tournament.

George Kennedy and Murray Ellis amassed 265 match points in section 1, while another Brooklyn pair, Milton Vernoff and S. Groggins, were earning 256 to lead section 2.

Mrs. Humphrey Wager and Miss Clara Hand of Atlanta, Ga., took the lead for the Women's National Pairs championship, scoring 208 points in the opening round.

In the mixed team of fours competition, Mrs. Anne Rosenfeld, Cleveland; Mrs. Harold Steiner and E. M. Goddard, Asbury Park, and Sir Merrick Werzner, Deal, N. J., won 19 of 20 matches, to lead after the first round.

Poles Hold 200 French Prisoners

Lens, France, Aug. 7 (INS)—Their lives endangered by lack of light, food, and water, 200 miners are being held prisoners in a coal mine near here by Polish fellow workers, it was disclosed today.

The Polish miners, infuriated by the discharge of two of their comrades in Communist incidents, stopped the Frenchmen in Le Forest mine at 10 p. m. Monday.

15 WORKERS DIE IN MINE BLAST

By Universal Service

Bristol, Va., Aug. 7—Fifteen miners were reported killed and many others missing after an explosion in an abandoned corridor of the Stonega Coal and Coke Company mine. The blast broke down the tunnel ceiling in the main shaft and trapped a crew of men working there.

Nearly 100 of the workers escaped. John Hopkins Hall, state labor commissioner, declared the explosion occurred in a part of the mine no longer worked, but said he could give no explanation of it.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

TUESDAY, AUGUST 7, 1934

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

The Tax Delusion

WITH various units of government in the United States on a spending spree, dispensing at least 40 per cent of the current national income, it is important to be fully aware of where we are going.

The soundness of the Federal fiscal policy hinges on fulfilling President Roosevelt's pledge to taper off expenditures after the economic emergency. The Chief Executive has set the goal of balancing expenditures against revenues in the fiscal year 1936.

Mr. Roosevelt's capacity to do this prudent thing will depend on two factors:

FIRST: On the resumption of sufficient private spending and investment to provide full employment.

This entails a cessation of business baiting and extreme experimentation, and a new willingness on the part of Government to work hand in hand with business leaders.

SECONDLY: The effort to balance the budget necessitates the building up of a sound public opinion in advance.

This entails fact facing, and dispelling the widespread illusion that a governmental spending orgy gives the average citizen something for nothing.

The burden of financing the Government falls on the shoulders of ALL GAINFULLY EMPLOYED CITIZENS.

Where the corporation pays taxes, it in reality merely acts as a collector for the Government, and adds the item of taxes to the cost and ultimately to the selling price of goods.

Likewise, the indirect taxes are widely borne by average men and women of moderate circumstances—not merely by the rich.

If tax rates should become destructive, the processes of trade and employment become impaired, and the adverse effects are distributed widely among the whole population.

It is a snare and a delusion to assume that only the wealthy suffer from extravagance and waste in governmental spending.

The curse of our present unscientific tax system is that it disguises the important contribution made by the masses to the upkeep of bureaucracy.

A widely diffused general manufacturers' sale tax would not only be an excellent yielder of revenue, but would also awaken the ordinary citizen to the fact that in the nature of things he must foot the bill.

The Yankee's Skipper

"You can't keep a good man down."

New Englanders are glad that there's more truth than poetry in that old observation, because it means they may yet see Charles Francis Adams' trim "Yankee" sail to the starting line in defence of the America's Cup.

Despite the fact that the fast, well-handled "Yankee" had been "stealing the wind" from the other Cup race contenders consistently, it seemed that "Rainbow" would be the almost certain choice against the British "Endeavour" when Captain Augustus Olsen, "Yankee" skipper, broke his leg.

But Olsen is a good sailor and not to be kept out of this historic race, if he can help it. He has surprised doctors who predicted that his leg would be in a cast for weeks, with his marvelous recuperative powers. He will be on deck when the final trials start.

And New Englanders, who more than any other Americans have the sea in their blood and love a white sail against the blue, stand more than a good chance of seeing a New England ship keep the America's Cup in America.

The Summer Stage

For the stage, the dog days were the dead days—until some Yankee artist on Cape Cod had a typical Yankee idea and decided that actors and plays might just as well follow their patrons to their vacation places.

Today summer theaters are spread all over New England and adjoining states. The Midwest, which long has enjoyed summer music, is also adopting the summer stage idea.

Meanwhile, New Englanders still get the cream of the crop. Within comparatively short drives from Boston are more than a score of summer show houses, many of which boast of Broadway stars on their boards.

Outstanding among them are those at Dennis, Cohasset, Provincetown, West Falmouth, Magnolia, Westford, Stockbridge, Putney, Vt., Peterborough, N. H., Newport, R. I., and Ogunquit, Me. Visit one the next time you feel like a show on a hot night. You will enjoy it.

Note Dedham's Example

Throughout Greater Boston more institutions like Dedham's Emergency Nursing Association are needed. This organization concerns itself primarily with the maintenance of a visiting nurses' service, a baby health program, clinic for preschool children, summer check-ups for school boys and girls and special care for undernourished youngsters.

But it also maintains a very modern first aid station with a well-equipped operating room and a two-bed ward. The place is not a hospital and cannot keep patients overnight. However, it is of inestimable value in automobile accidents and other cases where speedy first aid is needed.

Relatively cheap to operate, this enterprise does much good work, saves many lives. Cities would be safer places to live in if they were dotted with similar institutions.

For the Autoist

Nearly everyone in Massachusetts and the rest of New England is a motorist. And drives automobiles or rides in them more or less frequently.

Therefore there's much interest in the National Highway Users' Conference gathered today in Boston. The conference aims to take up unfair taxation and abuse of automobilists.

Manager Henry F. Stoddard of the Boston Automobile Club deserves praise for bringing the conference to its tasks.

A special feature of the gathering will be dealing with the diversion of highway funds contributed by autoists. The Massachusetts legislature has already diverted $10,000,000 of this money of motordom to other purposes than the highways.

ERA Safety Shows

Avoid accidents—if you can.

The latest ERA venture is teaching you how NOT to get hurt or harm others.

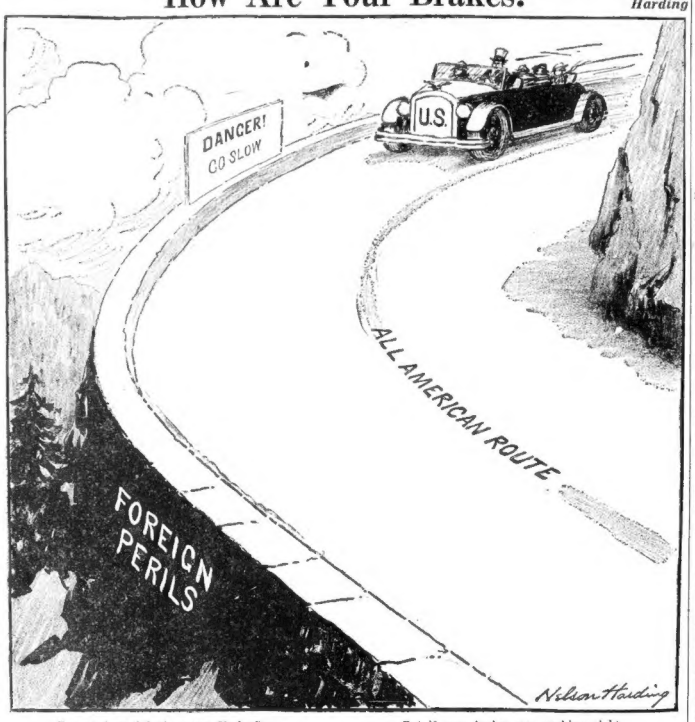
Today playground members in Dorchester are doing their bit by staging presentations that emphasize safety.

Activities will continue into next week. Among speakers are Registrar Morgan T. Ryan, Assistant Postmaster Patrick Connelly and Judge Sadie Lipner Shulman.

The object is worthy and personal to all of us.

How Are Your Brakes?

By Nelson Harding



You need good brakes now, Uncle Sam,
A curve is just ahead,
A danger spot that you well know,
And have good cause to dread.

But if your brakes are working right
And if your speed is slow,
You won't repeat your former plunge
Down to the rocks below.

Cure for Hawaiian Ills Rests With Congress

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Unless he can get the co-operation of the next Congress President Roosevelt will not be able to do much to better the administration of the territorial government of Hawaii.

Only Congress, which established the form of government under which Hawaii has become so largely an Asiatic country, can change conditions for the better.

HAWAIIANS EXPLOITED

The people of Hawaii are really not to blame for the exploitation which the islands have suffered at the hands of the ruling American families. Instead of developing Hawaii as an outpost of national defense in the Pacific these ruling families have exploited it as a private commercial enterprise.

As a result Hawaii, instead of being a source of strength, is rapidly becoming a source of weakness. It is impossible to make what is fast becoming an Asiatic community the American Gibraltar that Hawaii ought to be.

If Congress had followed the advice which Theodore Roosevelt gave while he was President of the United States, Hawaii would not have been allowed to drift into its present plight.

In December, 1906, President Roosevelt, in a message to Congress, said:

"The administration of the affairs of Porto Rico, together with those of the Philippines, Hawaii and our other insular possessions, should be directed under one executive department."

In the following January, after further study of the subject, the President had a bill introduced in the House of Representatives designating the bureau of insular affairs of the war department as the federal office to exercise supervision over Hawaii. Because of the failure of Congress more than 25 years ago to follow the advice of a great American president the Hawaiian Islands are not serving today the purpose for which they were annexed—they are not the impregnable outpost in the Pacific which they were designed to be when they became American territory.

Another effort to obtain legislative remedy for the present condition of affairs in Hawaii was made under the speakership of Mr. Garner during the last year of the Hoover administration. By the Democratic chairman of the House committee on military affairs—Congressman Quinn Williams, of Texas—a carefully drawn bill was introduced to reorganize the government of Hawaii.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTEE

By the terms of this progressive measure Congress would provide:

FIRST: That the government of Hawaii should be under the supervision of the bureau of insular affairs of the war department, as are the Philippine Islands and the Panama Canal, in each of which the defense problem is paramount.

SECOND: That the chief executive of Hawaii should be a governor appointed by the President without reference to residence.

THIRD: That four executive departments should be created, each of which should be headed by a commissioner appointed by the President without reference to residence. These departments would be: Department of public instruction and health, department of agriculture and public works, department of finance and department of justice.

FOURTH: That the governor and the four heads of departments, together with the commanding officers of the army and navy in Hawaii, should constitute the upper house of the legislature. The lower house would be continued as at present. The governor would be given general supervision over all executive offices of the United States in Hawaii.

FIFTH: That there should be created a Hawaiian constabulary and provisions should be made for the detail of an officer of the regular army to command the constabulary and of three officers of the army to be assistants to the chief of constabulary. The constabulary thus organized would be the exclusive police force of the islands, of the towns, city and counties.

ENCOURAGEMENT NEEDED

Enactment of this proposed legislation would show that Congress fully recognizes the real reasons for the annexation of Hawaii and is prepared to offer every encouragement to the development of the people of the islands consistent with the needs of our national defense.

If President Roosevelt will declare that the time has come to abandon once and for all the idea that the people of Hawaii should be less American than the people of continental United States, he will pave the way for legislation under which Hawaii will soon become the outpost of national defense in the Pacific which Congress intended it should be when that territory was annexed to the United States.

FOUR GOOD BOOKS FOR VACATION

So you're going on your vacation. And you wish I'd give you the names of some good books to read.

"Only," you warn me, "be sure they're easy reading. I can't stand highbrow stuff. And I hate 'improving' books in hot weather. Gimme something light and peppy."

All right. Here are four books that are as "easy" to read as the wrappers on a package of gum—and as "peppy" as any murder yarn.

Yet, in spite of your worst efforts, they'll do something for you—wise you up to a new Self and a new World if you'll give them a chance. All four have been reviewed in this department.

Elsie Robinson

First, it won't hurt you to know something about your own country. Strikes are going on. Riots. Why? You've had a lot of theories, done plenty of tall talking. How about reading a few facts for a change, in a report that reads like a seven-reel thriller?

The name? "I Went to Pit College," by Lauren Gilfillan. Viking Press.

PINT-SIZED FEMALE

Lauren Gilfillan is a pint-sized female—aged 22—with the curiosity of a Boy Scout and the nerve of an East Side cop. She had just been graduated, was busted flat and wondering what it was all about. She particularly wondered what striking, starving miners in the coal fields of Pennsylvania were all about.

Not having anything else to do, she went down to find out—and came back with a tale about America that will and should knock your patriotic gogs for a goal.

No, she doesn't rant. Nor preach. Nor go off half-cocked. Quietly, casually, in the simplest of words, she tells a terrible, shameful story. That story is already making American history. It is going to make more and worse history before it's finished. Better read it.

"If You Want to Get Ahead," by Ray W. Sherman, Little, Brown & Co.

Here's a story on your favorite theme, yourself. A success book—and they're mostly tripe. But this one is the real stuff. A thin little book with the whale of a wallop. Doesn't pretend to tell you how to become a master mind or captain of industry.

But it does tell you to make the most out of Jim Jones—whatever his job. And it will painlessly remove a lot of cockeyed notions. Swell for what ails us all.

"As the Earth Turns," by Gladys Hasty Carroll, Macmillan Company.

Remember one of those rare moments when suddenly everything seems right, as though a cool, kind hand passed softly over your tired heart, soothing away trouble and strain? "As the Earth Turns" is like that.

It is the story of old-fashioned America—of simple strong people living upon the soil—moving quietly, patiently with the turning seasons. The smell of gingerbread in a friendly, low-roofed room . . . of fresh ploughed earth beneath a quickening April sun.

The sound of sharp scythes singing down tall, bright flies of grain . . . of snow flakes rustling softly against a window pane.

And suddenly you're remembering the dreams you dreamed, when you and life were young together. A dream of a home, somewhere, small and sweet and safe; far, so far away from the hurt and the heat and the hate of the cruel city.

Is it too late—even yet? You turn the pages. The years slip away. You're young again. You'd always be young, if you could live like that. Suppose you tried? Well, why not?

"Russia Today," by Sherwood Eddy. Farrar & Rinehart.

Anybody can get a rise out of you any time by talking about Russia, can't they? Those terrible Communists! But what do you really know about "those terrible Communists?"

WOULD YOU DARE?

Have you ever read one serious, fair report of what they are doing, what they believe? Would you dare read a report like that? Would you dare compare the actual conditions in Russia today with actual conditions in America? If you would, here's the book for you.

It's written by a man who knows Russia and America equally well, and infinitely prefers America. But he's fair about it. Here are things which were hard for him, or any American, to take. He takes them—hands them on.

Now it's up to you. If you just want to go on yelling against Rusela, regardless, DON'T READ THIS BOOK.

But if you want to know what you're talking about—here's your chance.

Four books. One about America. One about Russia. One about yourself. One about the rich old earth from which we all come. If you will read those books, giving yourself up to them, they will make you over—raise your sky—push back your horizons.

'Pinch-Hitters'

By Winifred Black

Blanche is going to write a speech.

No, not make a speech—write it!

Blanche couldn't make a speech if her life depended on it—that is she couldn't make it for herself.

There is a standing bet among her friends that she would make a speech if some friend of hers asked her to help her out of a difficulty.

Winifred Black

Even as a little girl, poor little Blanche could never take part in any Sunday school entertainment—she would just choke and get so scared that it was pitiful to have to look at her.

A premeditated program of any sort always seemed to scare the life out of Blanche—but let some little friend get into trouble and before anyone knew what had happened, right into the midst of it Blanche waded.

And it seems to have followed her wherever she goes. As to being a success in life, Blanche has proved an utter failure—she has absolutely no confidence in herself, and yet, there doesn't seem to be anything that she won't tackle to "help out."

"Pinch hitter" is what her friends call her.

And so no one was surprised to hear that Blanche was writing a speech.

The woman who is president of something or other, called Blanche on the phone and said she'd just heard that at the annual meeting of her organization she was to be presented with an emblem and was to be called on for a speech—and she'd never made a speech in her life, and wouldn't Blanche write it for her?

And Blanche, who had never been inside an organization—or even heard of it, asked a few questions and told the woman who is president of something or other to come in next day and get her speech.

No—no one who knows Blanche has the faintest idea that what it will be a good speech, because she's doing it for someone else.

Of course, all Blanche's friends would like to shake her and make her look out for herself more.

But if they did wake her up—who'd be business adviser and attorney-in-fact for all her friends when they go to Europe—Blanche has more business of other people's to attend to than old Uncle Frank Matcher who used to be appointed guardian and administrator for every widow and orphan in the county—and never had any business of his own.

I don't know—I think it would be rather a pity to make Blanche over—I just can't imagine anyone turning to an aggressive Blanche when they're in trouble, can you?

SEA HUNGER

Always thought I'd like to be Master of a ship at sea.
Never watch one setting out,
Leaving me upon the shore,
But I turn my face about,
Saying: "Left behind once more!"
Once again I've heard them say:
"Little boys at home must stay!"

There is something of the sea
Keeps alive the boy in me.
Dead I've thought him many a year
And forgotten all about
But he seems to reappear
When the ship is setting out.
Anchor chains and hawsers slack
Bring that little fellow back.

As he stood long years before,
Still he stands upon the shore
As some great ship noses out,
Hearing older people say?
"Bravely turn your face about—
Little boys at home must stay!"
Still he waits and seems to be
Fascinated by the sea.

Human Side of the News; Power in Germany

By Edwin C. Hill

Who is the real power in Germany today? Not Hitler, the chancellor, but a graying man of 66, Germany's steel king and one of the great munitions magnates of the world, Fritz Thyssen. It was he who put Hitler in power and maintains him in power.

He does it for two reasons. He hates the French. He hates Socialism. If he cannot have the old monarchy, which doubtless he would prefer, he will take that form of Fascism which goes under the name of National Socialism, but which is very far from Socialism indeed.

THYSSEN BIG FACTOR

European observers who closely study the ebb and flow of the tides of opinion within the Reich believes that Hitler will survive as long as Fritz Thyssen wants him to survive. They believe that the bloody Saturday, wherein those individuals who would have thrown Germany to the left, to radical Socialism, were destroyed ruthlessly, was as much Thyssen's doing, if not more, than Hitler's.

They believe that Thyssen, head of the Vereinigte Stahlwerke, the German steel trust, looks forward to another "Day" when German arms will reconquer from the French the lost provinces of Alsace and Lorraine and the iron and coal fields which are the basis of the steel king's power.

The French, clear-headed and acute, recognize in Fritz Thyssen their most dangerous enemy and make no secrecy of their belief that Germany is rearming rapidly with Thyssen's direct aid and support.

Who is this silent man behind the throne of Adolph Hitler? He is one of the most interesting personalities in Europe. It was his father August Thyssen, who established in the Ruhr, at Muelheim, the vast steel industry which the son now controls, and which has relations with the other great munitions makers of Europe.

The beginning of the family was obscure and humble. August Thyssen founded his steel industry in a small barn which still stands at Muelheim. He built up his small business with coal and iron fields in the Ruhr and in Lorraine.

Amazingly thrifty and self-centered, a man of tremendous will and stubbornness, old August Thyssen employed thirty thousand men in his steel mills, in his power stations and on his railway and steamship lines when the great war came on.

PROFITS FROM WAR

August and son, Fritz, made enormous profits out of the war and then fell into difficulties when the Peace of Versailles turned the Ruhr over to the French as territorial hostage. Most of the German industrialists of the Ruhr lacked the spirit to do or even to consent to resist the French when that occupation came, but not the Thyssens.

Fritz not only refused to obey French decrees and regulations. He was tried and sentenced to prison and went to jail with his shoulders back and chin up, saying aloud that it was the happiest day of his life and the proudest.

He had never like the French, although he had found it convenient and profitable to do business with them, to expand and extend his industry into French territory but from the day of his imprisonment he has hated France and the French with an unholy hatred.

During the Socialist regime in the ill-fated German republic, Fritz Thyssen, now at the head of the vast Thyssen interests, was usually at loggerheads with the succeeding Socialist governments and very bluntly described the Socialists as the worst enemies of the German state.

It was this same Fritz Thyssen who was originally behind the revolution against the Socialists which ended in the downfall of the republic and the scrapping of the Weimar constitution.

TURNS TO FASCISM

He became an intense conservative, helped organize the Steel Helmet organization, which was frankly out for a restoration of the monarchy, and when he saw that cat wouldn't jump, turned to Fascism and the little man with the toothbrush mustache, Adolph Hitler. He rounded up his fellow industrialists and urged them to back Hitler and the Nazi cause. He threw all the power of his prestige and enormous wealth behind Hitler.

If European comment is to be believed, he urged Hitler to scrap the Treaty of Versailles and to rouse the German people to a new war of revenge. He was able to do all this because of his tremendous weight and scope of his power in industry and finance. Back of him were the great banking interests and heavy industry.

And now he stands like a shadow behind the clamorous Hitler, silent but all powerful, with the almost indestructible power of money and vast material possession.

Anything can happen in Germany. Hitler may fall as Dollfuss fell, may be destroyed as Dollfuss was destroyed. And in the general cataclysm Fritz Thyssen might go with him. But as the cards lie in the strange game that is being played over the Rhine, Thyssen holds the trump.
